FREDERICK & NELSON
FINE FURNITURE

ASK
ANY MAJESTIC
RANGE USER

As to the quality of the Majestic Steel and Malleable Iron Range, and you will find these facts: The Majestic Range heats more water, heats it quicker, bakes more evenly and consumes less fuel than any stove or range that the users have had anything to do with. You will find that the range does not get out of order, does not break and is thoroughly satisfactory in every way. The users of the Majestic Steel and Malleable Iron Range are its best advertisers.

To show our confidence we offer, and have offered for some time, to give $30 spot cash for any Majestic Range—no matter how long it has been used—who has it for sale, whether dealer or private party, or from whom it is purchased.

Our stock of Carpets, Draperies, Furniture and House Furnishing Goods is the largest and most complete in the Northwest.

University Heights

It is Seattle's Educational Suburb
It adjoins the State University, the Endowment of which is equivalent to $15,000,000

It is high and dry. It has perfect drainage. It is slightly and healthful. It attracts the best people. It is fast enhancing in value. It has churches and schools. It is out of the city smoke. It has independent water works. It already has many fine residences. It has street cars and electric lights. It has graded streets and cement sidewalks. It is an ideal community in which to rear children.

IT HAS THE BEST HOMES OF THE BEST PEOPLE

IT IS THE BEST LOCALITY FOR GILT EDGE
INVESTMENTS AS ALL EDUCATIONAL SUBURBS PROVE

It is cheap at $275 per lot. Lots there are sold on installments. It will quadruple in population this year. It offers the best opportunities for investments. It cannot be taxed to pay present city indebtedness. The purchase price of lots includes all improvements.

Under section 2099, revised statutes of the State, no saloon is allowed within two miles of University Heights

More people have Purchased Homesight in this Delightful Suburb Since the First of the Year than in all of the Other Suburbs of Seattle

Optical Specialist.

WE FIT GLASSES SCIENTIFICALLY.

The important science of optics is NOT A SIDE ISSUE with us. Intelligent treatment of the eyes requires special knowledge, experience and skill, experience since 1865 is equaled by but few opticians. We don't sell a pair of glasses just for the sake of making a sale. We are practical, scientific opticians, have the largest and most complete optical establishment on the coast for fitting the eyes accurately with glasses.

University of Washington Book and Stationery Store

Owned and Operated by the Student's Assembly Of the University

Text Books, Stationery and Supplies of all kinds sold at such a figure as will just pay running expenses. It is requested that students coming to the University will defer buying any of their supplies until they see our stock. This is the only place in Seattle where University Text Books and Supplies are kept.

As this is purely a co-operative concern, run by the students for their own benefit, it expects the support of all loyal students.

After one more snow
the Hyas
Tyee has launched his
Kamim and has bravely
Paddled past the great
White mountains, past the
Forests of mighty cedars
And firs, past many islands
To the harbor, where he knows
There is for him a welcome, and
Arrayed in his best attire
He mounts the granite steps
To give his

YEARLY GREETING
To the bold braves and
Pretty kloutchmen of our
ALMA MATER

New Members of the Faculty

DR. THOS. F. KANE, the new professor of Latin in the University, is a native of Indiana and a graduate of De Pauw University.

He gave some special attention to Latin even in his college course. At the end of his Freshman year he was awarded the "Freshman Latin Prize" in the contest in reading and writing Latin. At the end of his Sophomore year he was appointed Latin tutor, a position which he filled during his Junior and Senior years. In his Junior year he took second-class honors in Latin, and in his Senior year first-class honors. His work in college, however, was in no sense confined to Latin, and he has to his credit the winning of the "Cora Walton Pave Gold Medal," awarded at the end of the Sophomore year, in the "Sophomore Contest" in essay writing, and the appointment as one of the five Commencement speakers, out of a class of thirty-seven. On graduating from college he was elected to the chair of Latin and Greek in Lewis College, Missouri, which position he held for three years.

He then entered upon his graduate course at The Johns Hopkins University, where for four years he applied himself to the special study of Latin, Greek and Sanskrit. In this work he was under the direction of Johns Hopkins' famous trio of language teachers, Professors Warren, Gildersleeve and Blomfield. He was appointed Latin Scholar for '93-'4, Latin fellow for '94-'5, and in June '95 received the degree of Ph. D. The thesis presented for this degree and published is on the "Case Forms with and without Prepositions used by Plautus and Terence to Express Time." After receiving his doctor's degree, he was elected to "The Rutan Professorship of the Latin Language and Literature" in Olivet College, Michigan. This position he filled for five years, up to the time he was called to the professorship of Latin in our University. Before leaving Olivet College, Dr. Kane was selected by the University Publishing Company of New York to edit in their Latin series two of Cicero's essays, De Senectute and De Amicitia, which work he has now under way.

CHARLES CHURCH MORE, our new acting professor of civil engineering, comes to us from Bangor, Penn. He received his preparation for college at the Newark, Y. J., High School, from which he entered Lafayette College in September, 1894. He became a member of Phi Kappa, and upon his graduation was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. During his college course he received many honors, winning in his junior year the junior mathematical prize for the three years work, and also the junior prize in physics. In his senior year he took the senior prize in civil engineering. He was graduated in 1898 as an "Honor Man." He was substitute on the football team in his senior year, and played on the 'Varsity sufficiently to win an "L." Professor More was appointed a graduate student in civil engineering at Cornell University for the year 1898-99, and received the degree of M. C. E. from that institution in June, 1899. During the year 1899-1900 he was draftsman for Pencoyd Iron Works and American Bridge Company. In September, 1900, he became acting professor of civil engineering at the University of Washington.

DR. EMIL BORIES received his elementary education in the public schools of Sacramento, Cal., and Portland, Or. Later he attended the Portland Academy. In 1875 he commenced the study of medicine, under the tutelage of Dr. Augur and Dr. Littlefield.

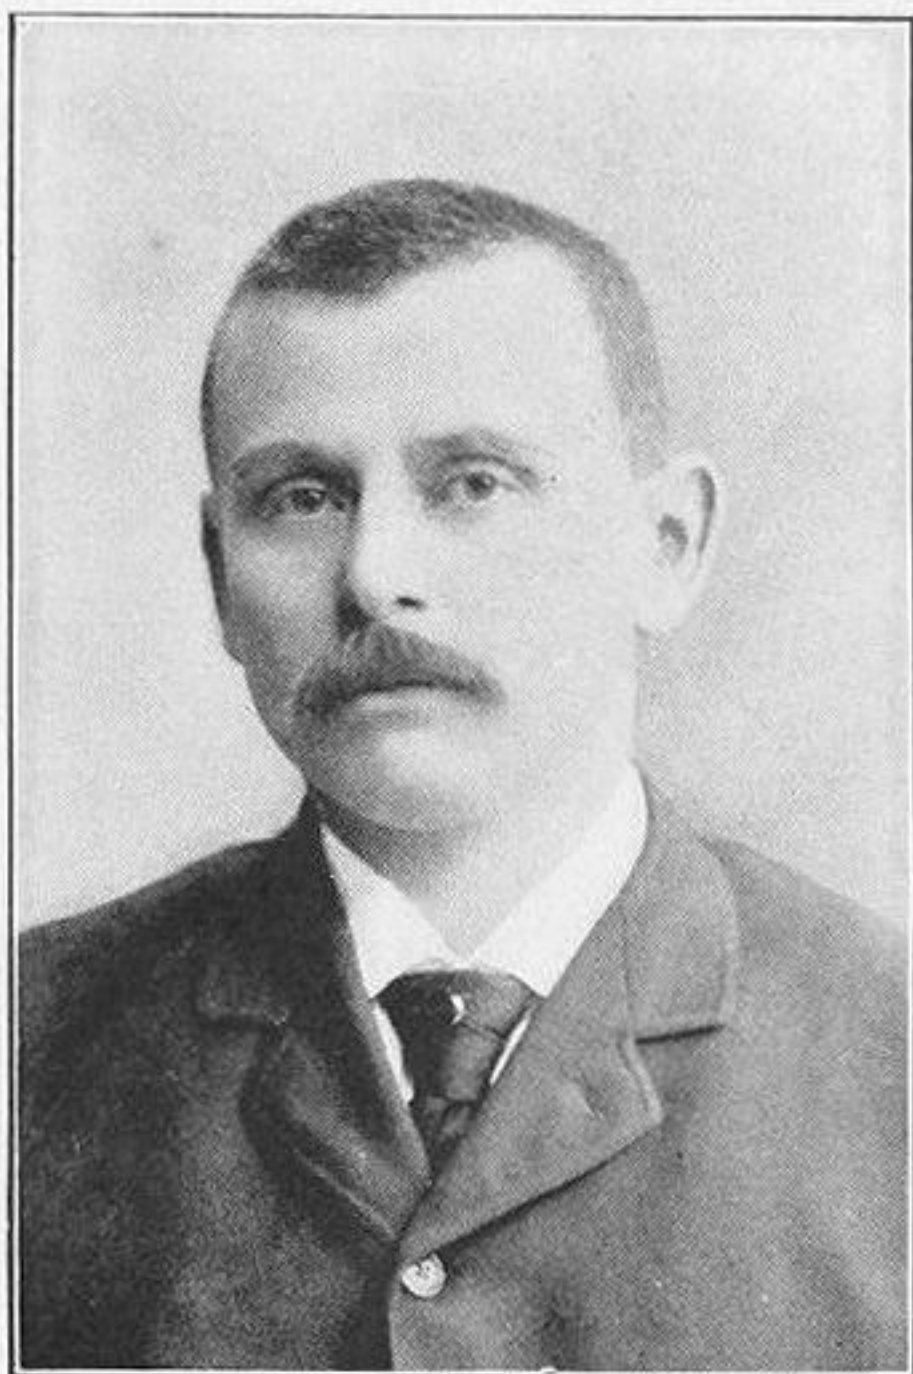

He attended four lecture courses at Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York city, and at the medical department of the University of Vermont, receiving his degree of M. D. in 1885. In 1891 he received his master's degree from the Society of American Literature and Arts, of Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Bories is the author of many medical papers, some of them receiving especial notice in the different medical publications. In 1891 he invented a stethoscope, intended, with the aid of electricity, to distinguish the sounds of the heart.

Dr. Bories is now practicing medicine in Seattle and he is in high repute both with those of his profession and with the general public. In addition to his practice he holds the chair of Materia Medica at the University of Washington. He devotes much time to research work and much of the success of that department is due to his tireless efforts.

JACOB DUTTENHOEFER received his public school education in St. Louis, graduating from the High School of that city in 1881.

He then attended the State Normal School at Cape Giradene, during the years of 1883-84.

Afterwards he served his time as machinist with the large manufacturing firm of Furth & Co., of St. Louis.

Since then he has held many positions of trust, in which he has always been highly commended for his ability.

His specialty lies in his skill as a construction engineer.

Mr. Duttenhoefer was chief engineer for the Seattle Electric Co., during the years 1892-93; and was engineer of the Front Street Cable Line during 1893-94. The next five years he was engineer and superintendent of the San Francisco Dredge Co.

At present he is engineer at the University of Washington and will have charge of the electrical construction of the new University power house.

W. J. MEREDITH, the registrar of the University, is well known throughout the state for his work along educational lines. For a number of years he has been prominently identified with the various County Institutes, both in the eastern and western part of the state.

He was a student in Enoch Marvin College, and later was for five years teacher and principal in the schools of Kansas. After coming to Washington he was principal of schools in Auburn for seven years; for one and a half years Professor of Literature and Composition in the Seattle High School. For the past four years he has been County Superintendent of Schools in King County, and for two years he has served on the State Board of Education. In both these capacities his work is well known and appreciated by educators of the state. Prof. Meredith has gained some prominence as a poet, being a contributor to a number of magazines. Last year he published a book of his poems, which has received very flattering notices in the magazines and papers throughout the country.

THE BUSINESS of the Alumni Association is carried on principally by the Executive and Student Committees, but a regular meeting of the Association is held once a year during commencement week. The Executive Committee may call a special meeting during the year if it is deemed necessary. The business of the Students' Affairs Committee is to suggest to the Student Assembly any improvement which it thinks advisable, and to co-operate with this latter body in all possible matters. The Executive Committee is making a strong effort to have the precedent established of always having at least one member of the Alumni among the Regents of the University.

ADDRESS TO GRADUATING CLASS

HON. JAMES A. WILLIAMSON, of Tacoma

Conferring of Degrees and Presenting of Diplomas

BY PRESIDENT, FRANK PIERREPONT GRAVES

THE SENIOR CLASS

IT'S CERTAINLY hard luck for a glorious institution like our beloved Alma Mater to have to acknowledge such a class. They are a failure from start to finish. Hardly that, however. In the beginning there were many bright fellows and fair maidens among the numbers of the class. But one by one they have left or dropped back into the pride of the University, the class of '02, until today the senior class stands without a parallel in the history of the college as not a class, but a crowd devoid of class unity, class honor, or even college spirit. Let us, however, except our "Duck" of museum, pole-vaulting and $270,000 appropriate fame.

In a few short years they have come from Prepdom through means known only to themselves up to this, the supposedly great senior class of '01. Yet today, having reached that goal and standing on the pinnacle of their youthful ambition, they have become so intoxicated with their imagined successes that it only needs the sober, steady mind of an ordinary man to perceive that their much-boasted greatness and superiority is not as it seems. They have been defeated at every turn! They have been worsted from politics to pugilism, and usually by their immediate successors! For instance we might cite the defeat of their famous political ring of last year, and also their equally famous defeat in the "three-round go" at the old grist mill.

Mention of this is sufficient. Details would be unpleasant, hence will be omitted. Compliments we should like to give, honors we should like to bestow, but these must fall to others. So, unwept, unhonored and unsung the class of '01 passes from the rolls of the University, pursued by the derision of all, like a homeless yellow dog with the usual caudal ornament of a tin can it passes around the corner and off into the oblivion of Alumnus Alley.

SCHOOL OF PEDAGOGY

JUST A FEW WORDS are needed to present ourselves to the living public and those few words are, "We are the Junior Class of the University of Washington." For the sake of a very few we might have to supply the figures '02, but, however, we have never seen any one so entirely out of touch with civilization that he does not know the University through the Junior class; but for yours and our posterity we will set forth in these lines a few of the reasons why it is the great and only class in our institution, and why no one ever speaks of the others except with heads bowed in shame.

Ashamed that they must be associated with any but the naughty, haughty, glorious Junior class. To those who are not Juniors we have only compassion and pity; we alone realize your inability to cope with us in the field of literary or scientific effort. You have been as like men as you could be in your surrender. As classes your subjugation has been complete, but we must warn you now that in the future, caution any individual in your midst against trying to put even a tinge upon the fair name Junior by pugilistic effort.

Upon the track and gridiron our class name is synonymous with success. Then away from the pugilistic and athletic field we point with pride to such great talent that it is doubtful whether in oratory Demosthenes himself would have appeared against us—statesmen, soldiers, orators and pugilists make up the majority of our noble class. But do not forget that as a class we have those who are already looked upon by the scientific men of the whole world as authority.

From a social side we are it. We invite and we attend, none others dare; the men, because they do not compare with us in courtly manners and speech which so easily win the attention and heart of the ladies; the women, because they know that in no clime nor under any sun are women so full of grace and beauty as the fair ones of '02. So in peace or in war, in love or in affairs of state we are looked up to, for hand in hand with our success goes Miss University. But soon now, my children, we will make way for others to follow in the paths that we have cut into what was before us a wilderness.

In the future years fond memories of our Junior days will be our consolations and the old man and woman will lift their heads with pride and say "I was one of the class of '02."

Sophomore Class

IN THE BEGINNING we will have to warn you that this is a subject about which there is absolutely nothing to write. We may go so far as to say that if a man were to spend years in quiet and patient research among their records he might find something to interest them for a few seconds. But in making even such a statement we are drawing largely on our imagination. We as Juniors have been trying in an impersonal way to make something of them as a class, but we have succeeded only in making them the laughing stock of the University. Sometime ago during the first of the college year we succeeded, by a series of well planned jollies, in getting them to appear against the Freshmen in a cane rush. The result in brief was that the Freshmen won easily, then loosing all fear became the aggressors, and tied the whole Sophomore class together and took them into town on the last car at night.

Honestly the Sophomores can't help themselves—some of them are willing, but they are bound hand and foot by cords not easily broken. Their feeble attempts remind us of the rapidly disappearing Red Man in his struggles for survival. It cannot last long, and we are sorry, for it will take from our midst those upon whom our poorest joshes are tried. Once in a while a Junior lets fall a really poor one, but the Sophomore laughs just the same; now think what it will mean to us to lose them. So, fellow students, let us rally and by combined effort we may put off for a time at least the fatal day. Some time ago this cry was raised and in the excitement of the moment we elected a Sophomore as athletic manager. Our pity and compassion prompted us to this action, for we realize possibly better than any, that here are a people who had they been men might have made a name for themselves. All possibility of that is now dead, and alas! one more class will have to step down into oblivion. So the world goes on; it is really too bad that beings amount to so little here below. Let us hope, though, that in the next world a place may be found for them; how pleasant it would be for us then to see a Sophomore coming toward us with a pail of water and a sponge to cool our burning brow.

For us all some hope lies buried in the distant future, and your lot is not all despair. But do not give up, children; come to us in your darkest hours and by the radiance of our presence some slight degree of despair may be dispelled.

FRESHMAN.

A New Member.

Here we are at last! Pass us not by, but listen to our story.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: Heretofore, this being our first year, we have devoted our attention to making ourselves the finest class in the University, and we flatter ourselves that in this we have achieved a brilliant success. Moreover, in our leisure hours we have amused ourselves by tying up the Sophs, sending them to town, and other forms of light amusement, with which we passed away the time. Thus it has come to pass that not until now has the outside world become aware of what we have accomplished.

Those of you who have read the flattering and disgustingly conceited class puffs written by members of the Sophomore and Senior classes will no doubt be surprised at the entire lack of conceit contained in this article; but as a class we have ever considered that it is deeds and not words which count in a university as in the outside world. Hence our modesty.

Nor do we consider it a lack of modesty to say that both as regards mental excellence and physical prowess we are unsurpassed. Our mental excellence is exemplified by our class standing. Our physical prowess needs no example. Of this quality we must have convinced every one who saw our behavior in our first class rush, in which our opponents were so badly worsted by a handful of untried Freshmen that in less than five minutes each individual Freshman had tied up three or more Sophomores, and several were shedding unmanly tears because there were no more Sophomores to tie up.

We do not blame the Sophs for their mental and physical worthlessness, for we know that it is not so much due to lack of honest effort as to lack of ability. Moreover, we admire the gentlemanly spirit which prompted some of their better members to come up and express a regret that their class was so entirely composed of lobsters, bums and Y. M. C. A. magnates. We sympathize with them in their affliction.

In general we do not approve of members of one class laying stakes on an opposing class. Yet the fact that one of the Sophs won five dollars on our victory in this rush does not impair our opinion of them as a class, for we like to see true sporting blood, and we realize that that man had a clear knowledge of our prowess.

It has been ever thus in our rushes, and of them we have had not a few, for as often as the Sophomores persist in overstepping their privileges and carrying canes, so often they have to be punished. They will painfully learn, however, and soon it will be conceded by all, without exception, that the class of naught four is the pride of the University. As it is, the page of Sophomore achievement will remain fresh and clean for the brilliant advent of the class of '04, when for the first time the Sophomore class will become the shining light of the University.

Serene and smiling we pass by the glowing page of our first year. If this gives but a poor conception of the peerless class of '04, let it not be set down to the fault, but to the inadequacy of our pen to clothe in fitting terms the glories of our class, the ruling spirit of the University.

W. T. BURWELL, President '04.

MILITARY DEPT.

The Cadets

MAJOR W. W. REINHART

The University of Washington Cadets have been under the immediate command of Cadet Major W. W. Reinhart for the past two years. Under him a new cadet enterprise, the encampment, was planned and carried out.

The University of Washington Cadets, accompanied by the cadets from Vashon and Seattle and Tacoma High School Cadets, went into camp May 3, 1900, at Magnolia Bluff. The camp was in every respect a success, and much good work was done toward instructing the cadets in camp duties, guard mounts, and in general field work.

Lieutenant Colonel Maus, Inspector General of the Pacific Coast, at his annual inspection this year, gives a very gratifying report of the military department to the War Department.

Last year a cadet battalion of two companies was formed, and this year the same organization was continued with even more success and better results were obtained than in any previous year. Some arrangements have been made with the Seattle High School Cadets, as we hope soon to perfect a battalion organization with the two cadet departments. This will create an interest in military affairs among the cadets and likewise give them an insight into organized work on a larger scale.

Some battalion drills between the University and High School have already been arranged for, and in the near future the plans will be put into execution.

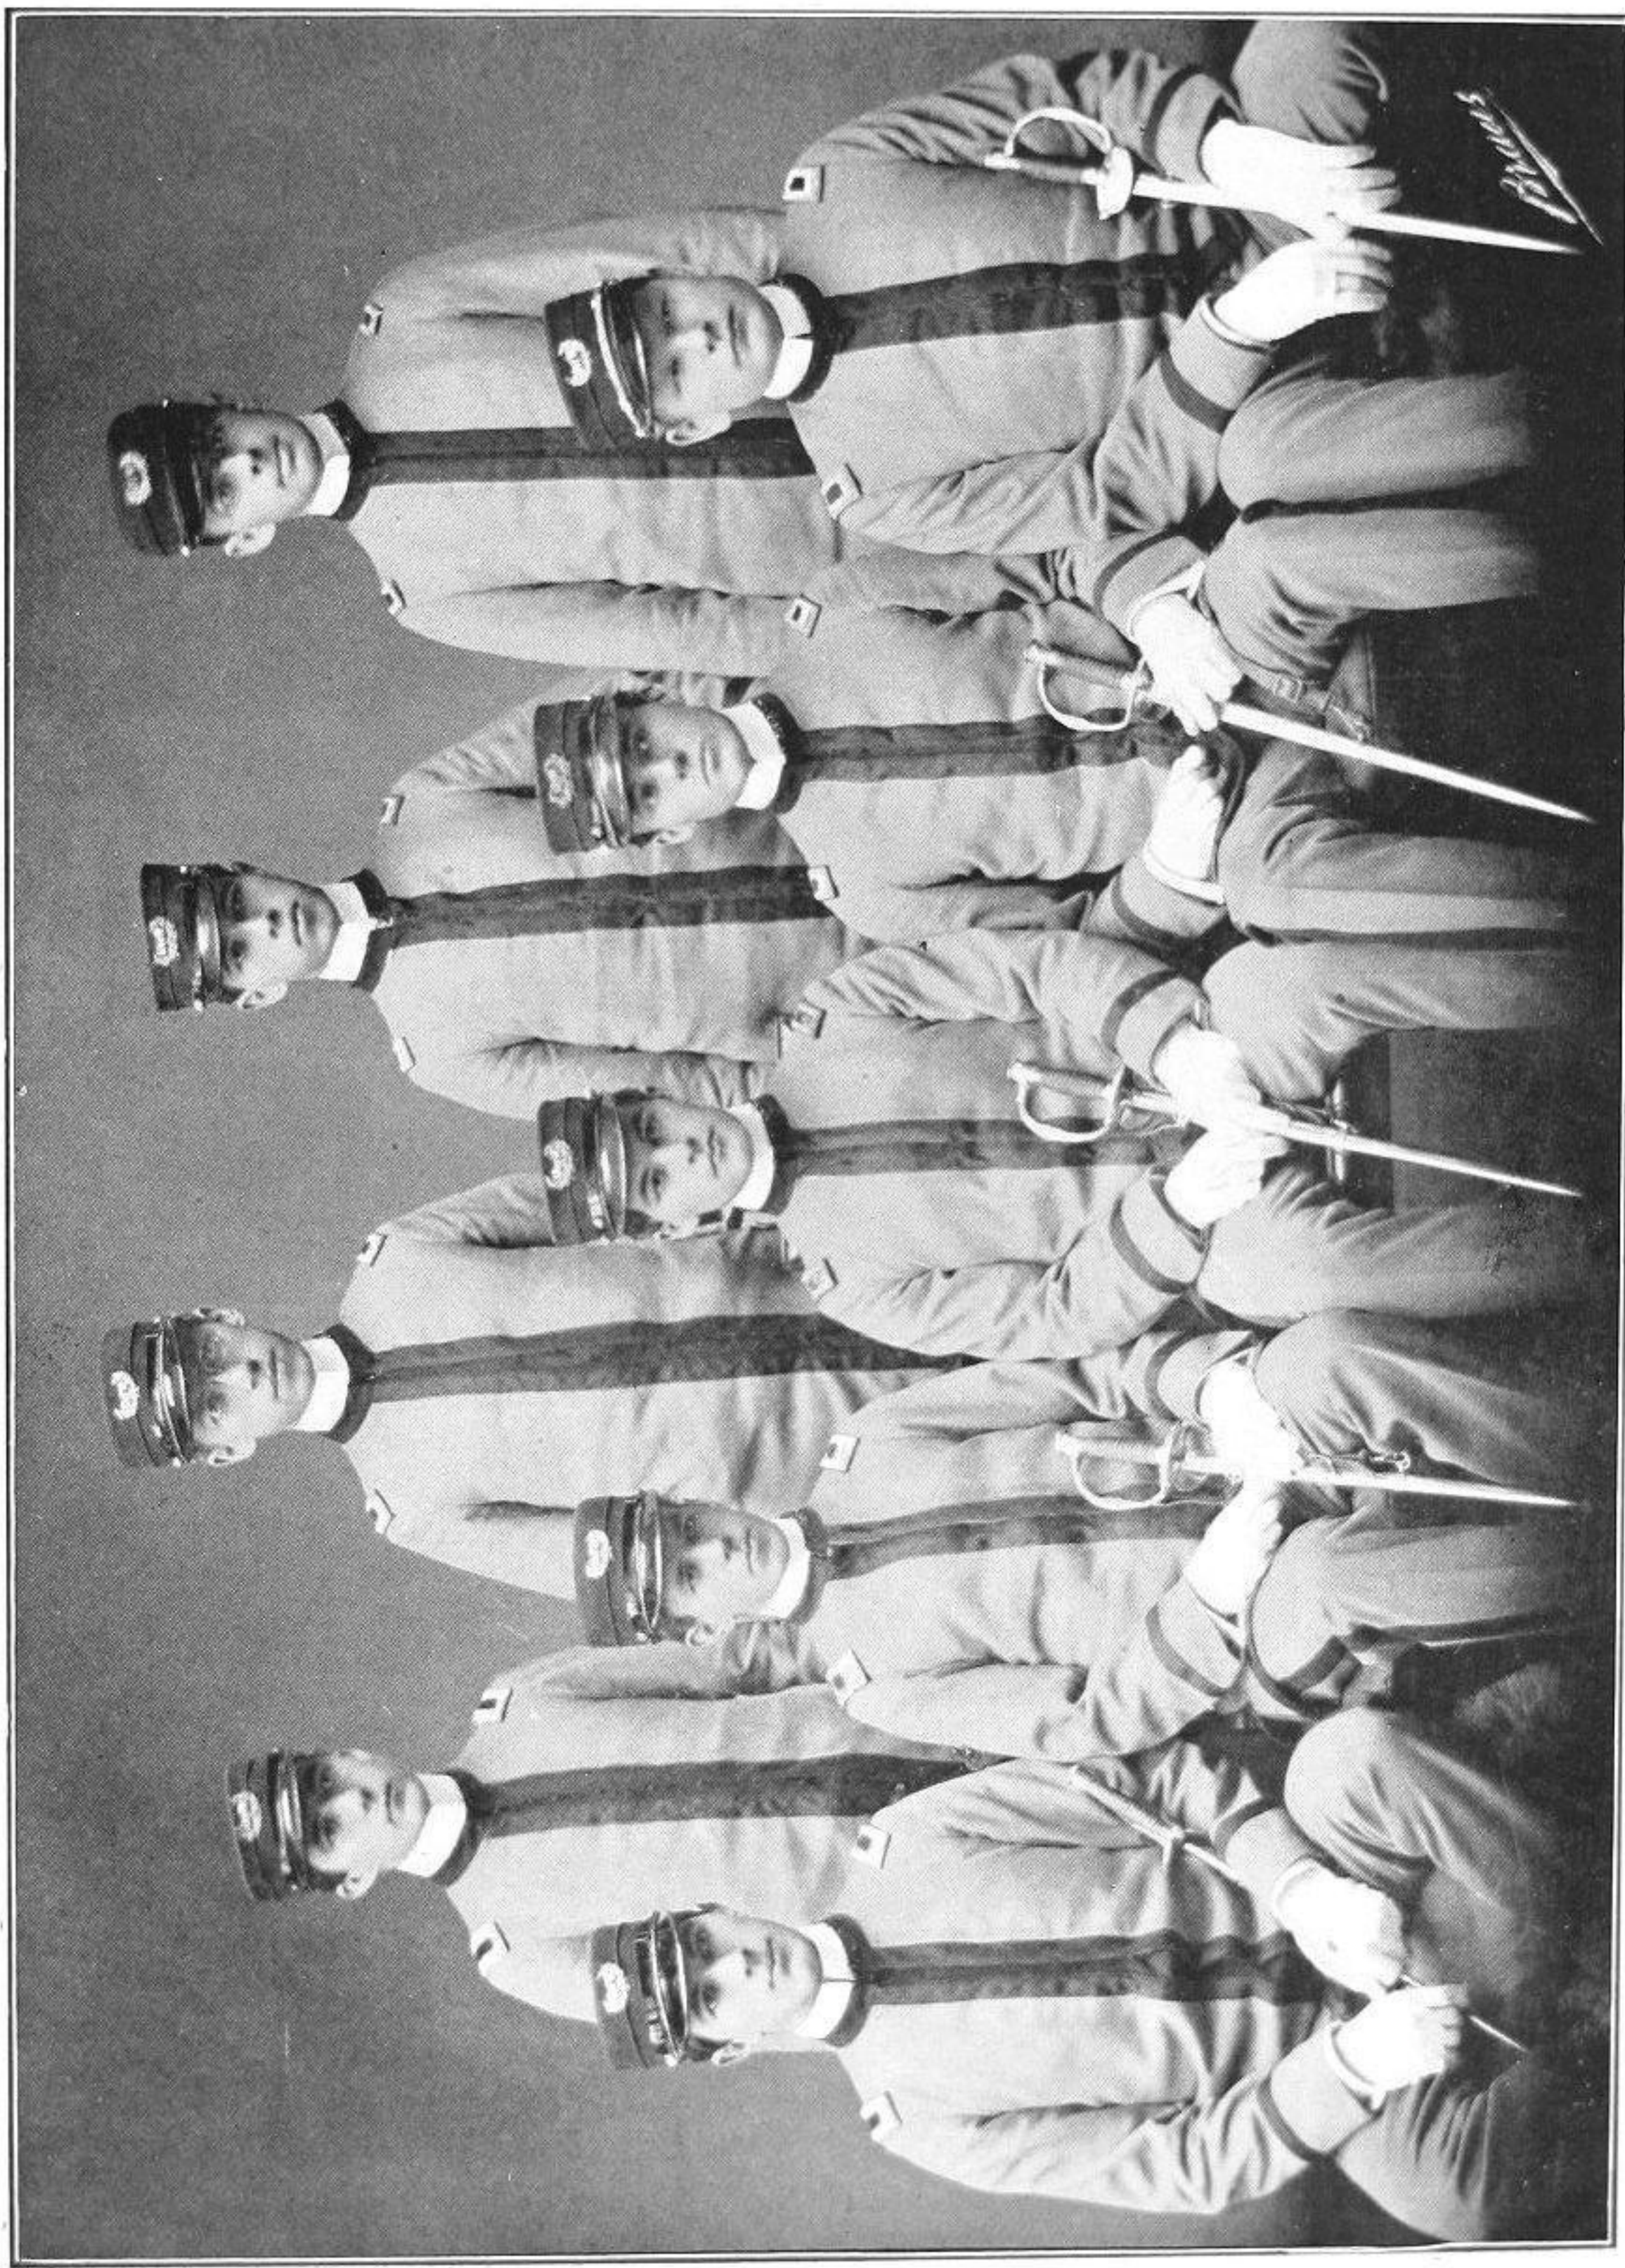

The cadets are looking forward to an encampment this year, one which promises to be even a greater success than the one last year. The work within the last year has been very gratifying in its results, from a military standpoint. A much needed start has been made in the direction of securing a cadet band, and at present that organization is coming to the front very rapidly.

Athletic Review

A. D. REMINGTON
Manager

THE YEAR of 1900 commenced with University of Washington as champion of the gridiron in Washington and Idaho. As yet track athletics was not an important factor, but with the revival of athletic interest in foot-ball began strenuous efforts to form a track team. Through the efficient coaching and training of Charles Wilcox Vander Veer, coupled with the enthusiastic support of the students, a team was turned out which was sent east of the mountains to meet Whitman College at Walla Walla, and Washington Agricultural College and the University of Idaho at Pullman. The result was an overwhelming victory over each institution, making University of Washington champions of Washington and Idaho in the cinder path as well as on the gridiron.

Later we met the University of Oregon in Seattle and in an exciting and closely contested meet were defeated, 62-60.

On the gridiron we were not so successful, yet no year has ever been so successful and full of victory.

The successes of this year, backed by the enthusiasm of the students, have pushed the University of Washington to front, not only in state but interstate athletics, and bid fair to place her among the leaders of the West.

Athletic Association

THE ATHLETIC AFFAIRS of the University are now under the control of the Athletic Association. Although great care has always been shown in financial matters, and athletics have been made self-supporting, still it has been deemed necessary for the best interests of the institution to bring athletics under the direct supervision of the associated students. With the coming in of the collegiate year for 1901-2 the Athletic Association will be a thing of the past.

AT THE beginning of the season the prospects for a winning team seemed the brightest for years. We secured an eastern foot-ball coach of great reputed fame. Several of our veterans were gone but the Freshmen seemed large and strong. Early in the season we met the snappy Seattle High School Eleven and won. Later we went east of the mountains, playing a tie game (11-11) with Whitman College at Walla Walla, and a few days later played an up-hill game with the stalwart miners and farmers from the University of Idaho, score being 12-6.

Immediately upon returning home our captain and left tackle fell ill and yet on Thanksgiving, crippled as we were, we played the crack team of The Washington Agricultural College to a standstill. Twice we were forced back to our goal line and as often we equalled the occasion and placed the line of scrimmage far to the other end of the field. Each of the teams went over the line for a touch-down. Score 5-5.

THANKSGIVING FOOT BALL GAMES, U. OF W. vs. W. A. C.

The Thanksgiving Game

IT CERTAINLY WAS a Thanksgiving game, if you take the word literally, for the way we gave thanks in the last half and after it was over wasn't slow. We certainly had reason, too. When the 'Varsity played the University of Idaho in Spokane, Coach Allen, who wielded the black snake over the Farmers this year, told us that he had a team that would beat us 30 to 0, and as we had no reason to doubt his veracity, things began to look dubious, more so on account of our previous inglorious record: and what made it worse was that they were betting two to one against us in the city, and many bets were taken that we wouldn't score.

That game proved one thing, and that is that the U. of W. can play ball when it has to. We knew we were up against it, and that only a combination of grit and speed could win. The Farmers were heavier and had been coached by W. T. Allen, the old Michigan coach. They say he got a piece of rope and pounded foot ball into the men of the Palouse. Whatever his coaching methods are, the Pullman men had great team work, but they ran up against an aggregation of stars when they aspired for the championship on Thanksgiving, and their team work availed them little on that field of mud. The way old Cal tore through that hay-seed line was something beautiful. The bleachers simply went up in the air when he bucked through centre twice for fifteen yards and the way he went through tackle for a touch-down made Coach Allen look sick. Huntoon and Hill would trot around the Pullman tackles for three or four yards whenever they wanted to, but they showed their business training on defensive. They would simply pick up an end run, a la Michigan, and throw it back for a loss. Little Cossy was also a bad actor, for when they gave him the leather egg he would do a thirty-yard dash as unconcernedly as if it were in the armory and he was wearing a "Gym" suit instead of a thirty-pound foot-ball outfit. Duffy didn't star—he never does, but he sawed wood just the same. We noticed that he played all around a few Pullman ends, even if Br'er Allen didn't see fit to put him on the all American. Geary doesn't have to be mentioned; being quarterback, he speaks for himself as well as the remainder of the team.

When we start to say anything about the line playing we find ourselves too full for utterance. The way Guy and Ryan tore up those famous tackle plays, and the way Mac and Davis opened up holes for Calhoun to make his ten yard sprints, while Fields would cake walk over Jones and get the Farmers behind the line, simply made old Allen jump straight up and down. When that line hurled W. A. C. back the necessary three times on our ten yard line and gave Hill the chance to kick the ball to safety it earned the admiration of the co-eds. forever. And to add to poor Allen's worries, U. of I. sent him a telegram of congratulations on the 30 to 0 victory (?). He said that what football W. A. C. knew he had pounded into them, but he over-estimated his pounding ability when he figured on 30 to 0 against the 'Varsity. But it's all over now and we'll forgive him, for he was a nice man. Next year, however, there is a possibility that a prophecy of 30 to 0, favoring the other side this time, may come true. Till then we have hopes.

JUNIOR FOOT BALL TEAM

Class Games

IN 1895 the Seattle Post Intelligencer offered a magnificent silver cup as a prize for inter-class foot ball games at the University. The cup was won that year by the class of '95 and has not been played for since.

During the past year a team was organized by the Junior class and a challenge issued. No other class saw fit to accept the challenge, although the Juniors offered to play a team composed of representatives of all other classes including Preps. and post graduates. Consequently the P. I. cup now goes to them by default.

TRACK ATHLETICS after a decline of several years arose to all its former glory the past year, and the victories achieved remind us of the good old days when Don Palmer and other old veterans upheld the honors of the track.

The past season has been one remarkable for the fine records made and the number of college records broken: some of them which had stood since '96 and '97. The most striking record and the one which stands out in greatest prominence is the new Pacific Coast record established by last year's relay team. The new record was made by Caulkins, Chesnut, Thayer and Morford, the time being 3 minutes, 34 seconds.

For the season of 1901 new men are showing up well, and the last year of Captain Caulkins at college bids fair to eclipse any of those which have succeeded it.

PRACTICALLY the first appearance of the University of Washington in the field of baseball was made this spring. Games have been arranged with all the leading colleges in Oregon, Washington and Idaho, and also with Stanford and Berkely. The strongest point in the team is undoubtedly F. C. Schoch, who played last year on the University of Iowa team, and who has an enviable record in that section of the country.

OUR TENNIS during the last year was confined entirely to local games at the University. But these games showed that there was plenty of good material in the institution, and all that was needed was the establishment of inter-collegiate relations to bring out one of the best teams on the Pacific Coast.

Aquatics

INTEREST was first awakened in this branch of Athletics this year. Before this it was impossible to get a crew and shells; but by the magnificent support which the business men of Seattle have given, this obstacle has been overcome, and this year promises to be an excellent beginning for aquatics. Already a number of men are training faithfully for the different class crews.

Women's Athletic Association

THE WOMEN'S Athletic Association is an active organization controlling the athletic interests of the co-eds. During the past year two basket ball games have been played—both with the Tacoma High School. The University was the winner in both games, the score in the first, January 19, at Tacoma, being 18 to 1, and in the second, in the University Armory, February 23, 6 to 2.

The second team also defeated the Seattle High School team, March 15, 8 to 4, the game being played in the Armory.

The girls have put in an excellent cinder tennis court this spring, just back of the Armory, and this branch of sport will also hereafter be a feature of co-ed athletics.

Hand Ball Tournament 1900

GREAT INTEREST was taken in the Hand Ball Tournament which took place during the spring term of 1900. Six couples competed for the double prize. Miss Megrath and Miss Herren won the doubles with Miss Mitchell and Miss Hubert a close second. About seven young ladies tried for single prize, a silver medal, which Miss Hubert won.

Of a Literary Nature

A Song from the Hills

LICKER and gleam, wild mountain stream,
Laugh till the echoes ring;
Would I were free, to follow thee,
In thy pathless wandering.

Bubble and whirl, foam, fleck and swirl,
Sing to the whisp'ring pine;
For ne'er on earth was given birth
A soul so free as thine.

Shadow and sun, waver and run
Over thy sandy bars.
And on thy breast, the curled foam crest
Mimics the quiet stars.

Crimson and gold, ripple and fold,
Swept by the wild wind's sigh;
Quiv'ring beat into eddies fleet,
Under the sunset sky.

And far away, the dying day,
Wearied with pain and wrong,
Sinks into rest, adown the west,
Lulled by thy tender song.

MAY THOMPSON.

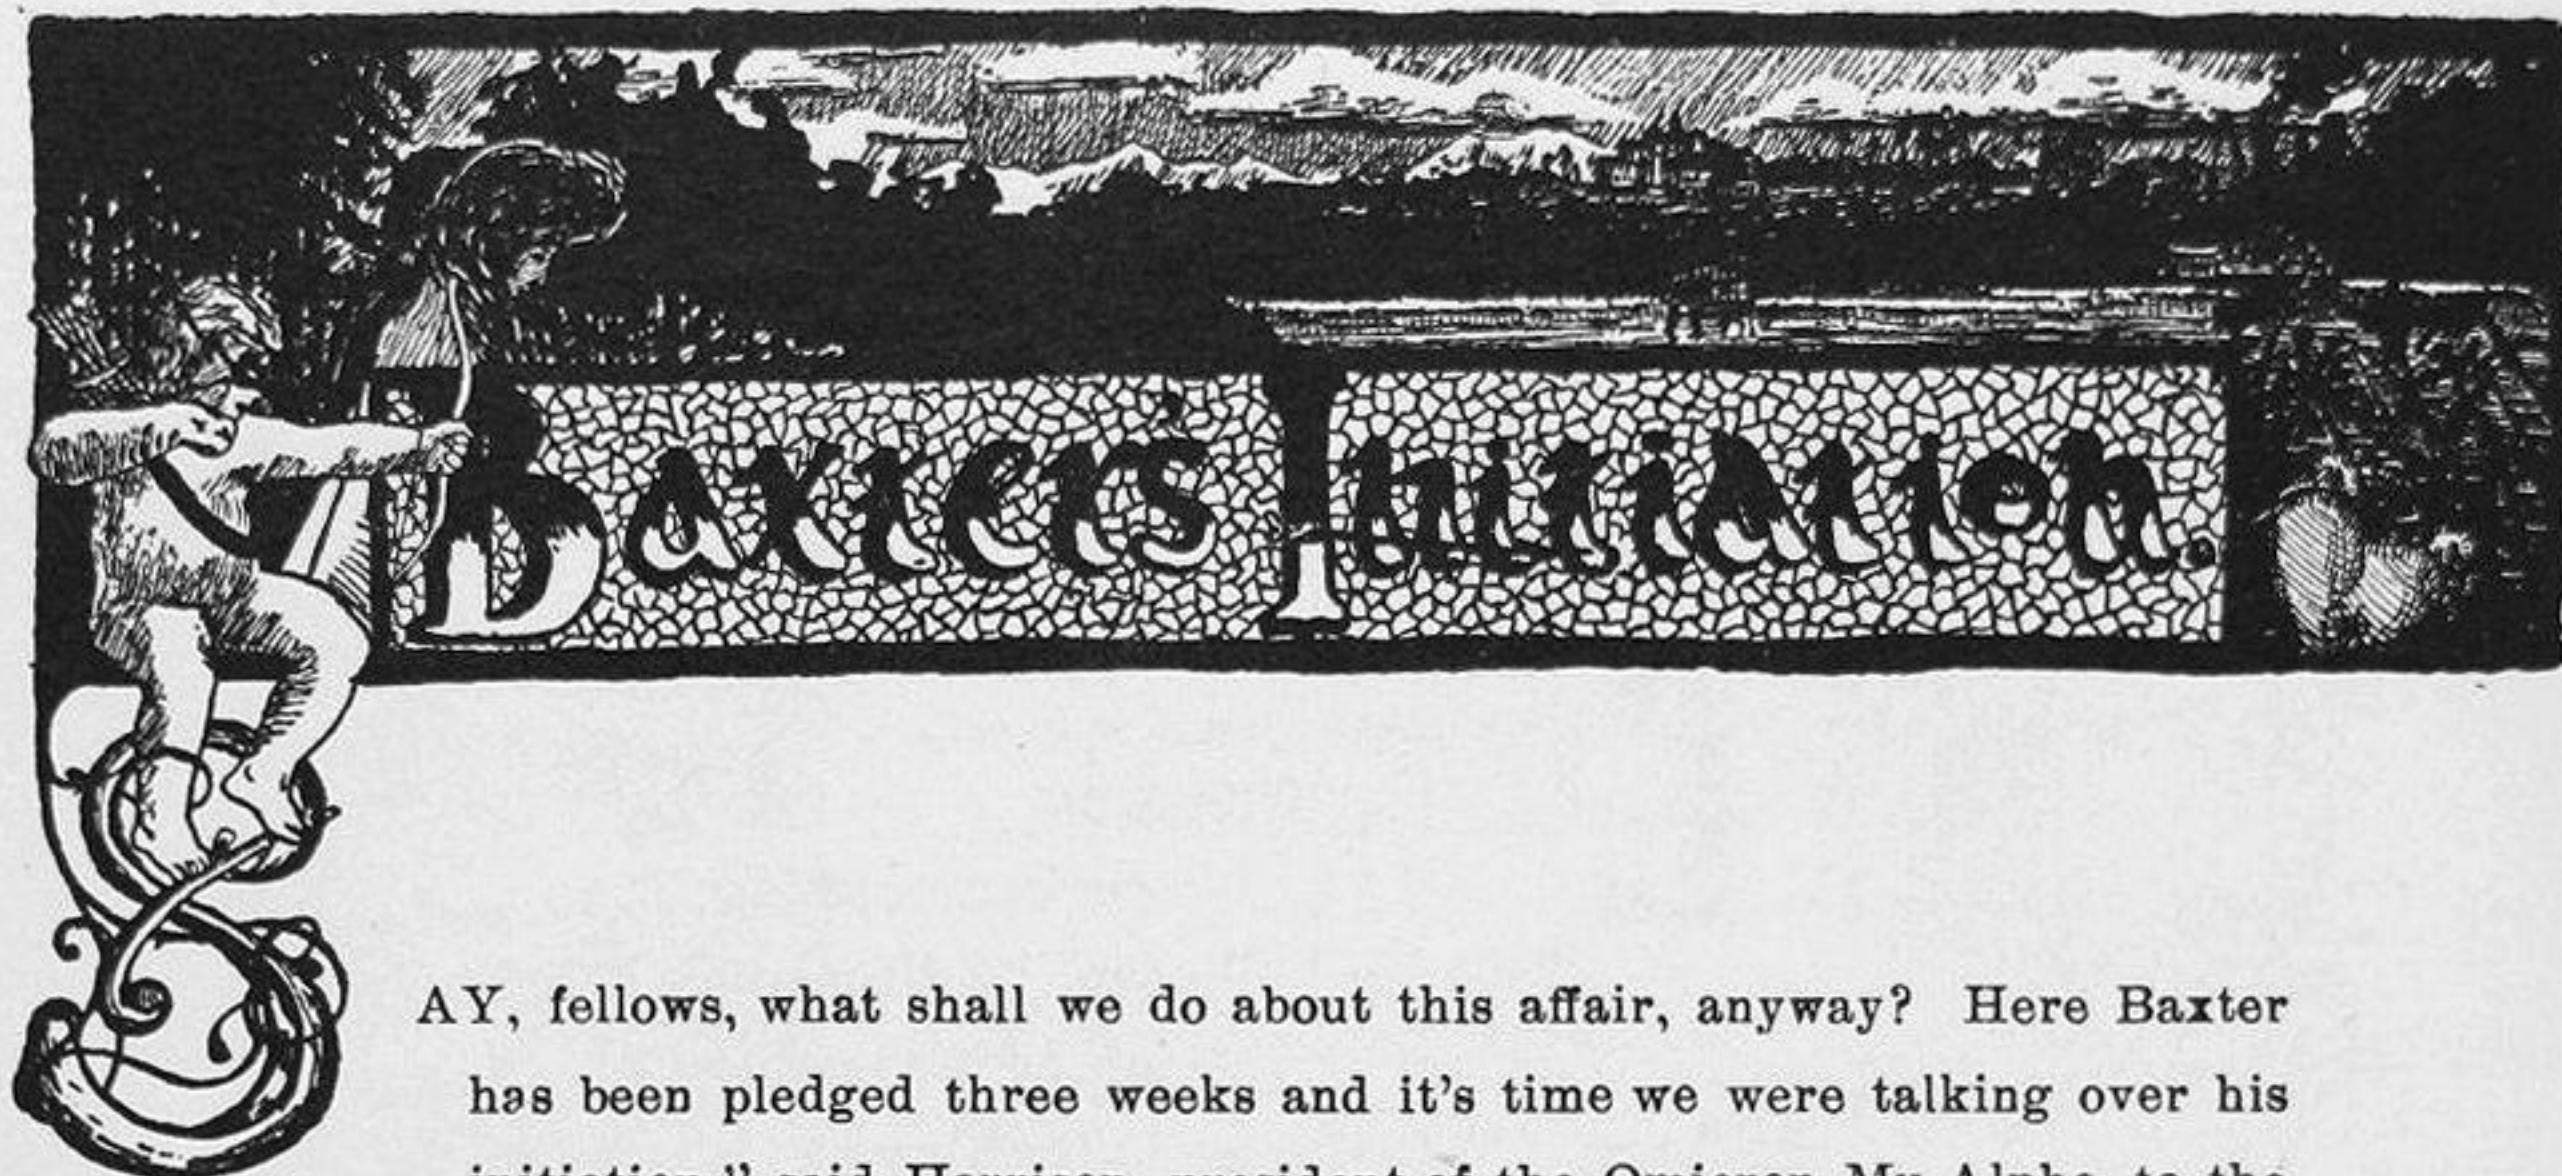

Song of the Season

LET the poets sing
Of the blithesome spring,
With its buds and its blossoms bright;
Let them sound the praise
Of the summer days,
Aglow with a golden light.

But I'll raise my song
For the season strong,
That comes with a sounding swirl;
That bows the trees,
In a boist'rous breeze,
And tosses their leaves awhirl.

For my fancies race
With the leaves apace,
And my heart as the wind is bold,
And my hopes are high
As the shifting sky,
Where the rollicking colds are rolled.

ROWENA KEITH KEYES.

AY, fellows, what shall we do about this affair, anyway? Here Baxter has been pledged three weeks and it's time we were talking over his initiation," said Harrison, president of the Omicron Mu Alpha, to the members at a meeting held in the library of the fraternity house.

"It is about time that we were doing something," spoke up Smith. "I'd give a farm to see him take the same dose we gave Jim here."

"By Jove, so would I," spoke up that individual. "You've had your laugh on us. George and I now want a turn."

"Why on earth couldn't he have gotten here two weeks sooner and taken the oriental along with our two new members?" drawled Jackson from the depths of the largest leather chair in the room.

"Oh, you've heard as well as the rest of us about his father's sudden illness which detained him at home just as school opened and which consequently made him a month or so late in entering. We boys, though, can pat ourselves on the head to think we got the prize after the tall rushing Baxter received from the other frats," said Smith.

"You bet we can," laughed Brown. "But that's not to the point. I suppose we must give Baxter the important part of the initiation and let the fun go."

"Not on your life! I know Baxter expects to ride the goat, and in view of the fact has been getting himself in readiness for the past two weeks. It would be sad to disappoint him," declared Smith.

"I tell you, fellows, it would be too much of a good thing to go through all that red tape so soon again. Why can't we play some good joke on him that will offset all but the essential part of the initiation?" asked Brown.

"An excellent idea, Harlow, excellent. Have you any suggestions to offer on the nature of the joke?"

"None worth mentioning at present, but I'll keep on the alert for a good one."

"Say, how'll this strike you?" asked Jackson excitedly. "There's to be a Girl's Meet next Friday afternoon, open as usual to all but the gentlemen. Now Baxter would make a fine looking girl. Let's dress him up and send him to the meet on the pretext of getting some points for the Junior Farce. Then take Reed here; he's up to most anything, and I'm willing to bet he'd make a daisy in feminine attire—no offense meant, Jack, old man—we could rig you up, too, unbeknown to Baxter so you could follow him to the gym, get a seat beside him, and strike up a conversation. In the course of your tête à tête, just mention what a joke it would be for a boy to come to one of these meets clothed as a girl, especially since the girls were willing. Go on in that strain until Baxter will own up to the whole thing and will tell who he is. After you've recovered from your astonishment, pretend you've heard all about him from your brother, who, of course, is in the same fraternity, and give him a lot of jollies until he'll have lost his heart. The acquaintance mustn't end here, so you want to get pretty far along in order that at last when he awakes to the true state of affairs it is going to hit him rather hard."

"Clever head, Rob, old man! How long did it take you to figure this all out? Your plot is O. K. with the exception of the allusion to my own personal self," laughed Reed, who prided himself on being, though short, one of the best looking boys in the school. "However, if the plan meets with the approval of you fellows, I'll do what I can to carry it out. What have you others to say, anyway?"

"We say it is a lulu. Don't we, fellows?" spoke up Smith.

"You bet," said the rest in unison.

"You're a trump, Jackson, and no mistake," laughed Harrison. "Gads but I'll have to masquerade myself so as to see the fun. Wouldn't Prof. Wiltby tear around if he should catch on? Reed, you're just the boy to make the thing a go. By the amount of time you fool away with the girls I should think you would be well coached in their art of jolly. Oh, pardon me, probably the co-eds of your acquaintance never jolly."

Reed tried to force a grin. "Oh, no, they never do. Hang it, anyway, I wish a girl would give a fellow straight goods once in a while."

"They say: 'A boy never jollies the girl he loves, and vice versa,'" said Axton twittingly. "But we're getting off from our subject. From all I know of Baxter, he's just the one to enjoy the risks he would run in attending that meet, and he is not so slow when it comes to flirting with any young maiden so bewitching as Miss Reed."

"Oh, come off, Axton, I'll back out of this affair," replied Reed, "if you guys are going to twit me like that. I'd have declined at the outset, but I wish to see this thing a success, and I'm the only man to fill the bill."

"Whew, how modest we are," snickered Brown. "But that's all right, Jack, we understand how you feel about it."

The next night Baxter was initiated into the Omicron Mu Alpha fraternity. He had to smile to himself several times during the evening to think how easily he was getting off. It was so different from what he had expected. Here was his one consolation in entering college late.

Later in the evening Harrison got Baxter off in a corner and said to him: "Say, old man, do you remember telling me that you had been looking about for something to do so as to make a name for yourself at this institution? To have made the First Team in your Freshman year doesn't seem to satisfy you, but I'm aware you missed the Cane Rush and Hazing, two events which test a man's metal. Now here's a chance for you to distinguish yourself. There's to be a Girls' Athletic Meet next Friday P. M., and I suppose you've heard that at these functions no men or dogs are allowed. Well, Brown here has been chosen to write the Junior Farce, and he wants a few pointers about these affairs to work in. He admits himself that he wouldn't cut much of a figure disguised as a girl, and we quite agree with him. Now, since you are anxious to do something out of the ordinary, why can't you act as his reporter?"

"I'm willing, but for the life of me I can't see that's such a prodigious undertaking."

"You don't, ha? Why, if Wiltby caught on himself or some one should tell him, it would be all off with little Willie and no mistake."

Baxter entered into the plan with a will. Anything a little daring was right in his line, and he wanted to show his fraternity men that he wasn't to be stumped.

Friday morning at the breakfast table the subject of the meet was brought up.

"The girls will have an excellent attendance this afternoon if this fine weather continues," said Smith.

"By the way, will Jessie be down for it, Jack?" asked Brown, grinning wickedly at Reed.

"I'm expecting her," said Reed shortly.

"Who's Jessie?" asked Baxter. "She's a young lady I haven't heard mentioned before."

"Jessie, you haven't heard of Jessie?" inquired Brown, in pretended astonishment. "Why, she's Reed's sister. Pretty as a picture, too. She's welcome to me at any time."

"Will she be here for dinner? By George, I must meet her," said Baxter, perfectly unconscious of the smiles being exchanged around the table.

"No," answered Reed, getting up from the table. "She wrote that if she came down she had to catch the five P. M. train back to A——, and the meet isn't likely to be over until four. But I know she wants to meet you, and if those girls don't carry her off, I'll see that you get an introduction."

On account of its being the first meet of the season and the fine day, the co-eds were expecting a large attendance. They were not disappointed. That afternoon saw crowds of well-dressed women, young and old, friends and relatives from the city and surrounding towns, gathering upon the campus and walking in the direction of the gymnasium, where the meet was to be held.

Along with the crowd hurried Baxter, with Reed close behind him. The boys had worked hard to get the two ready in time, and now as they looked from the windows down upon the fruits of their labors, they felt amply repaid.

"I bet there won't be a finer pair there," laughed Smith.

"I hope Reed's voice doesn't give him away. Wasn't his sister, Mrs. Anderson, a peach to lend him the outfits? We would not have dared to trust a single girl out here to help us out," said Brown.

In the meantime the subjects of this conversation had with much difficulty reached the gym, and Reed was fortunate in getting a seat next to Baxter.

The meet opened with a competitive drill in which all the girls took part. The prize, a gold watch, was to be given to the best drilled girl.

The contestants had been excellently trained. To the audience it appeared as if each girl was striving her utmost for the palm. Not until several exercises were over, did anyone make a mistake.

Baxter and Reed both became so much interested in the drill that they forgot entirely their mission in coming.

Gradually girl after girl dropped out until finally only three remained on the floor. "I'll bet on Miss Hunter," said Reed, jumping up excitedly, without thinking who or where he was.

Baxter turned around with a start; certainly that voice sounded familiar, and yes, the owner of it did look like Reed. Could it be possible that he had had the luck to occupy a seat beside Jack's sister? What fun it would be to talk to her and then, after she knew him well, he could tell her this little joke. So he said: "I believe Miss Manxter has a better show. She doesn't appear the least bit nervous."

Just then Miss Hunter and Miss Ray both made mistakes and Miss Manxter found herself the happy possessor of the prize.

"You were right," smiled Reed, "how glad I am I didn't bet a box of candy on the winner. My, isn't it hot here, and what a mob!"

"Yes, there is a jam; we were fortunate to get seats," replied Baxter.

"And to think that all this crowd is made up of women, it makes me think of bargain days. I suppose you know the girls are entirely willing that the boys be admitted, but Professor Wiltby has notions on that subject. I don't see the harm, do you? Wouldn't it be rich if any boy had the nerve to dress up as a girl and come to this meet? I'd really admire a boy with that much spunk."

"Honestly, would you approve of it?" asked Baxter eagerly. "Wouldn't the girls care?"

"Not at all. That boy would be quite a hero in their eyes, but Professor Wiltby would more than rave if he found it out."

"Can you keep a secret?" inquired Baxter.

"Did you ever see a girl that couldn't?" laughed Reed.

"Well, I won't answer that question, but what kind of a girl do I make any way?"

"Why, what do you mean?"

"Well, what would you think if I told you that somebody here to-day is putting into practice what we have just been talking about?"

"And you are trying to tell me that person is you? Why I don't believe it."

"I'm the boy," replied Baxter.

And you had the audacity to do a trick like that?"

"Oh, come now, don't be hard on a fellow," said Baxter reddening. "I was a fool to tell you, but from your talk I was conceited enough to imagine you weren't jolly. Since I have plunged in, however, I might as well finish. My name is Baxter, and ——"

"Oh, are you Mr. Baxter whom I have heard my brother talk so much about? You naughty boy, you, to come here to-day," said Reed banteringly. "You entered this year, didn't you? I've heard so much about you that it seems as if I really knew you. Jack was worried for about a week for fear you would join some other frat, but I knew your head was level. Let me congratulate you on your common sense. Do you know you make a fine girl?"

"Oh, thank you," said Baxter bowing as profoundly as the limits of the situation would permit. "You do me honor. A fine girl indeed. A pretty compliment and neatly turned. But, pray, let me explain my presence here. The boys of the frat put me up to it. Brown, you know, is to write the Junior Farce and he wanted some pointers upon a Girl's Athletic Meet, so the fellows thought it would be a good joke to dress one of us and send him in. I was the victim. Now, what do you think of me anyway. I'll admit it was sort of a snide trick."

"I don't think it was, after all," said Reed slowly. "Of course it surprised me at first, because it coincided with what we had just been discussing, but I can't say I think the less of you for it. Why, you were brave to do it. I presume those other boys didn't have the nerve?"

"Oh, no! But, then, they knew I was a little Freshie, so they gave me the job."

"Has your errand been satisfactory?" inquired Reed smiling.

"Yes, till I commenced talking to you, when, presto change, the charm in the meet was gone."

"I see you are skilled in the art of giving compliments, too, Mr. Baxter. But to come down to seriousness, don't you think the Omicron Mus are the boys? And haven't they a lovely frat house?"

"Needless to say I wouldn't have joined them if I hadn't thought them all right, and the house is certainly O. K. That makes me think that a dance is to come off up there two weeks from to-night. Quite a swell affair. Each boy is to invite a girl, and honestly it has been worrying me a good deal whom to invite. The girls here have been awfully good to me, great jolliers, you know, but come right down to the point I am shy about asking any of them."

"You poor boy, I know you must be timid. But why don't you ask some one you know then—not necessarily some one you've known all your life, but a person whom you really feel as if you understand?"

"Pardon me, but that's how I feel after this talk with you. I guess it's because your brother and I are such good friends, and you do look a lot like him."

"So every one says. But I don't see anything to pardon in your other remark. It is kind of mutual, you know."

"Is that so? Well, then, would it be presumptuous in me to invite you to our dance?"

"Not at all, and I'd be delighted to accept. I have a sister living in the city and I could come up from A—— and stay there."

"That'll be great! By Jove! the show's over. We had best settle this thing now, for it isn't likely I'll see you again before that evening. Is eight o'clock a suitable hour for me to call? I can get your address from Jack."

"Eight o'clock will suit me to a 'T.' But I must hurry if I expect to meet Jack at that building at ten minutes past four, for it's that time now."

"I am sorry not to be able to accompany you up there, but the risk is too great. So I'll say good-by here. Don't forget my date, and don't tell a soul, will you, about this afternoon?"

"Trust me for that," said Reed solemnly. "Well, good afternoon."

The boys at the house didn't do a thing to Baxter for the next two weeks. He was joshed from morning till night about Jessie, but he took it all good naturedly until one day, after he had received an extra dose, he inquired: "Well, are you jealous?" and then he got angry because they all, even Reed himself, roared.

The night of the party had arrived at last. Baxter had taken particular pains to look his best, and as he gazed at himself in the glass, just before his departure, he heaved a sigh of inward satisfaction.

"By George! girls are right when they say a dress suit is much more becoming to a fellow than his football outfit," said he to Smith.

"That's certainly your case. Where on earth did you pick up that chrysanthemum?"

"It's a hot number, isn't it? I went all over town to get one that would do. Say, but I'll have to hustle, I'm late as it is. Hasn't Reed shown up yet? I don't care to make a mistake in the house."

"No, Reed hasn't appeared. Trot along and trust to luck to find the place."

An hour later Baxter found himself ushered into Mrs. Anderson's drawing-room to wait for Miss Reed.

She presently appeared, completely enveloped in the folds of a long handsome opera coat. Her fair head was almost concealed beneath a cloud of filmy lace. In one hand she carried, in none too graceful a manner, a huge bouquet of Marechal Niels which Baxter had sent up in the afternoon.

"I am sorry to have kept you waiting, Mr. Baxter," she said. "Allow me to introduce you to my sister, Mrs. Anderson. Is it still raining?"

"I should remark. I hope you won't spoil your dress in getting out to the carriage."

"Oh, I guess I shan't," said the fake Jessie, winking at her sister.

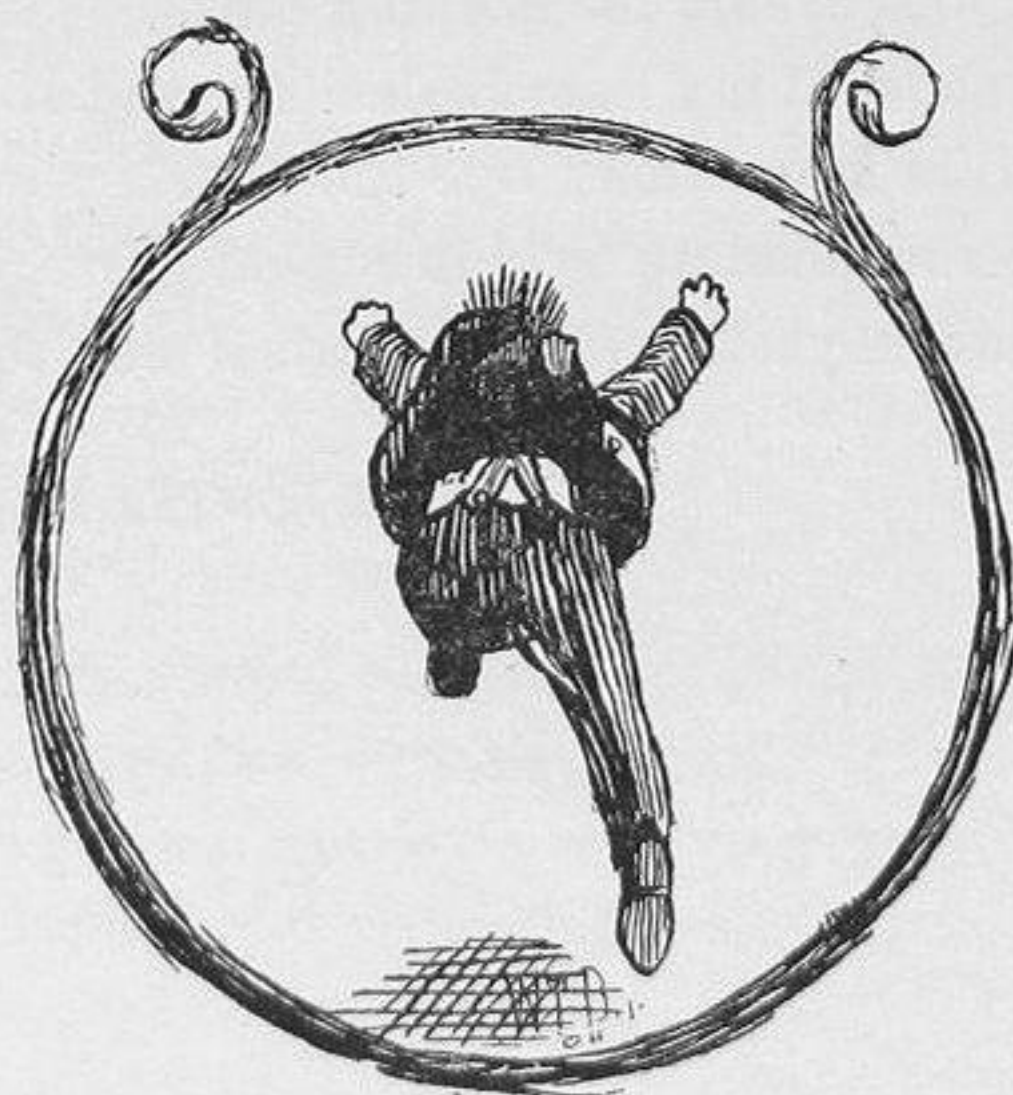

After the two had entered the carriage it didn't take them long to reach their destination. But short as the ride had seemed to Baxter, they missed the first two dances.

"Oh, we can't miss this two-step," said Reed excitedly. "Can't I just throw off my wraps here, so as to let us start right in?"

And before Baxter could reply, she had led her escort straight to the middle of the room, with a force none too gentle for a maiden's arm, and flinging off her wraps, Reed in his dress suit was revealed.

Baxter took one look, uttered a very forcible ejaculation, and then bolted 'mid the shrieks and roars of the company present.

My Dream Garden

N pleasant dreams I roam dim unknown lands,
And seem to see a garden fair,
A peaceful vision lying far from men,
A solitude, walled 'round from care,
Where cloudland shadows seldom darkly stray
To cast their shade upon its beauty rare.

And in the centre of this garden stands
A fountain, flowing o'er whose sides
The water falls with murm'ring melody
And thro' the fragrant bower glides.
For nature's music only breaks the calm
Where peace of dawn and sunset bright abides.

Within this quiet garden of content
I rest, and dream for nothing more,
For here are all my heart's desires, and so
Oft while in dreams I ope the door
Of sleep that leadeth to this region fair
And shut myself away from life's mad roar.

ZOE ROWENA KINCAID, '01.

Epitaph to a Fern

DEEP in the mountains rough and gray,
A lonely hillside stands,
In chinks and nooks the wild flowers play,
Waving in gleaming bands.

Among the rest, a dainty fern
Springs from the jagged slope,
Its whispering fronds to heaven turn
As it casts its spores afloat.

The whirling wind in eddying haste
Sweeps them in circles wide,
Some, higher yet, are safely placed,
Some down where dark streams glide.

Hurled forth afar in rapid flight,
One circles through the air,
But falls at last in a crevice tight,
'Neath moss and lichens rare.

* * *

Now strangers come with blast and bar
And loosen up the rocks,
The iron hill, with rumbling jar,
Trembles beneath the shocks.

Far from their parent cliffs conveyed
The titan blocks they bore
Towards where the setting sunlight played
On the ocean's glowing shore.

Then reared aloft by straining line,
The massive stones are placed
To form the buttress of a shrine
By nature's presence graced.

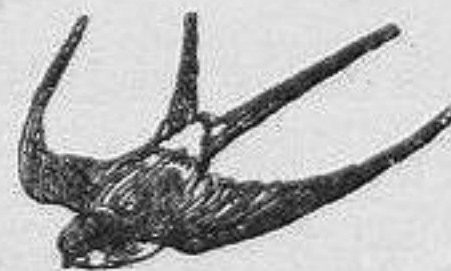

A temple fair, to knowledge reared,
Stands on an inland sea,
The tribute of a mighty race
To progress and the free.

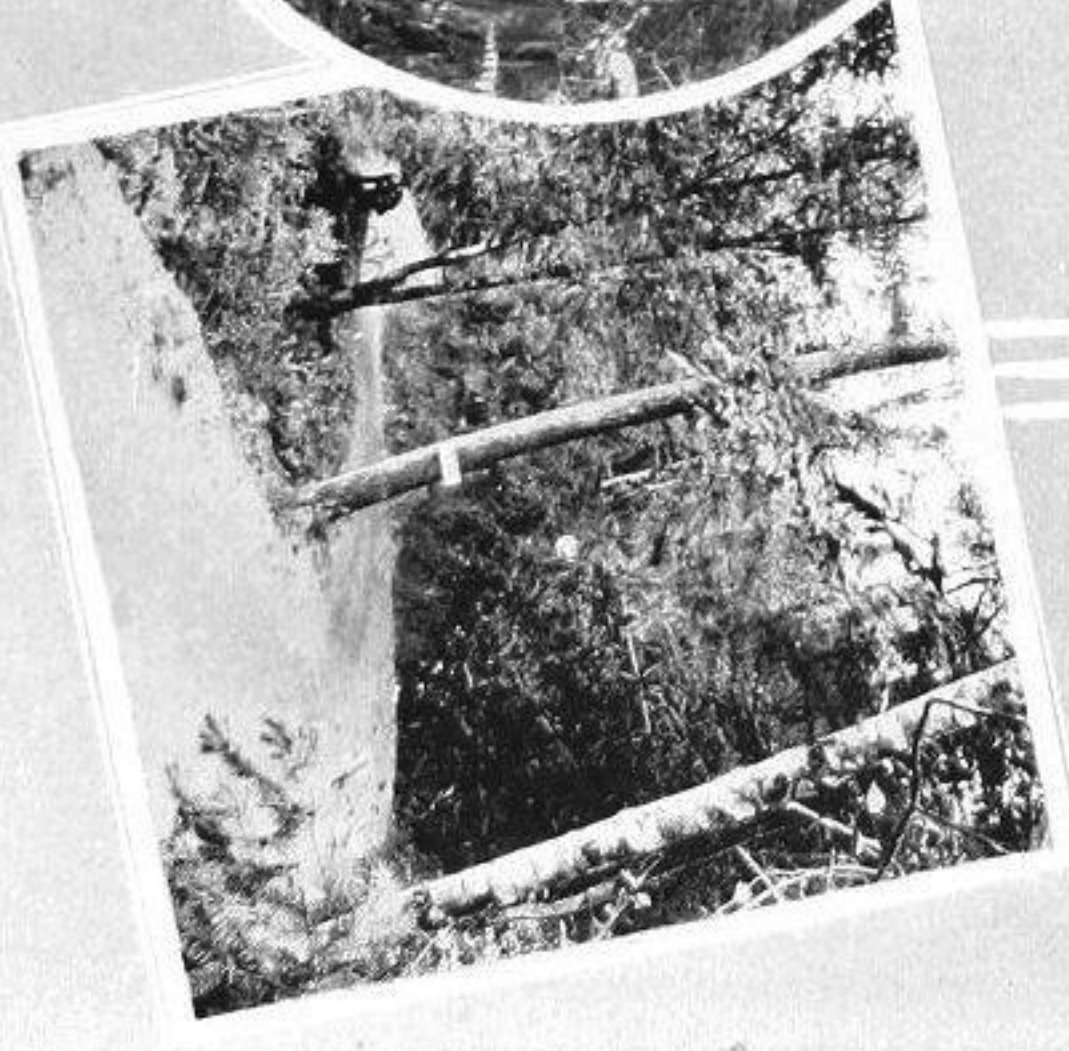

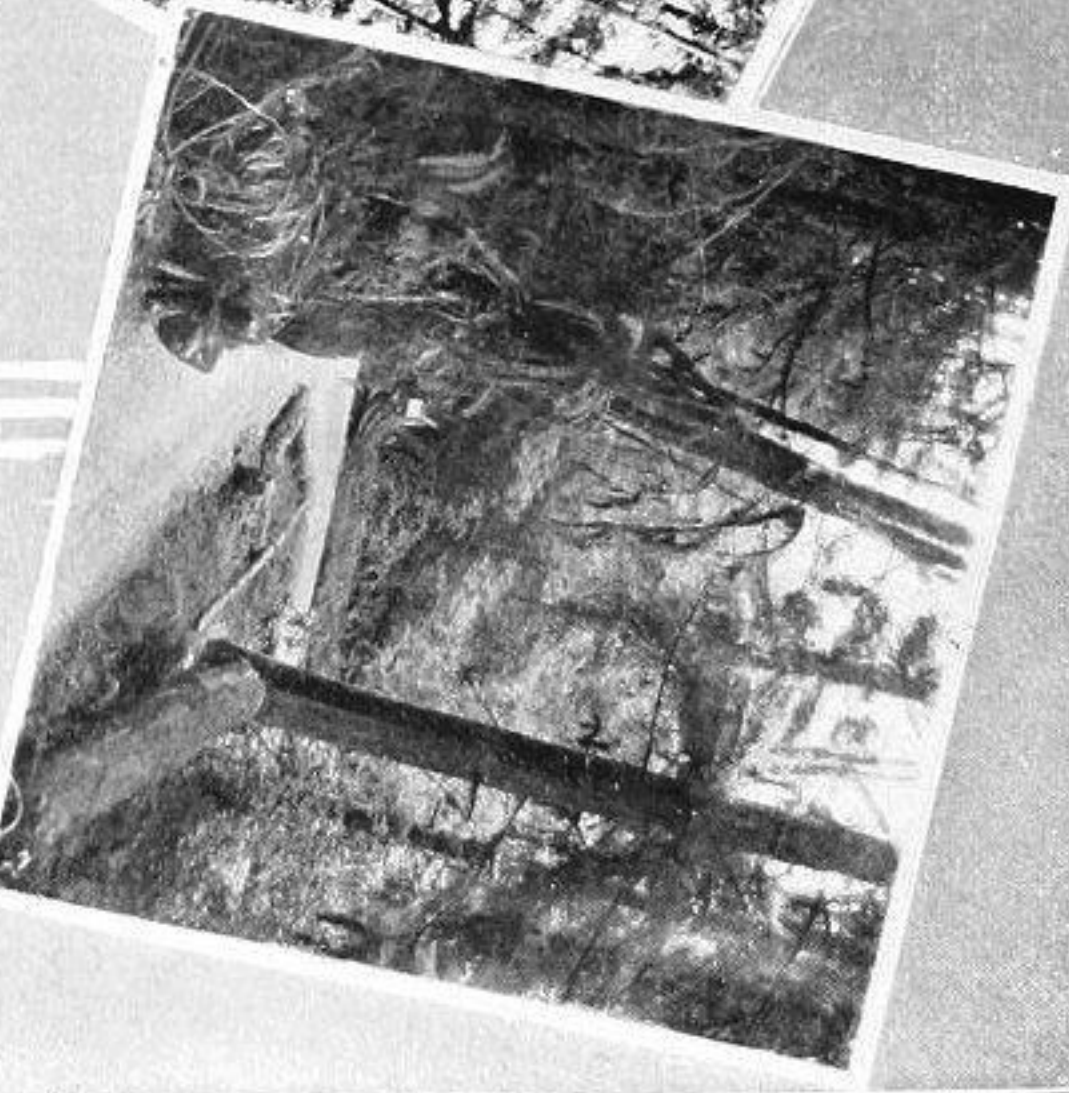

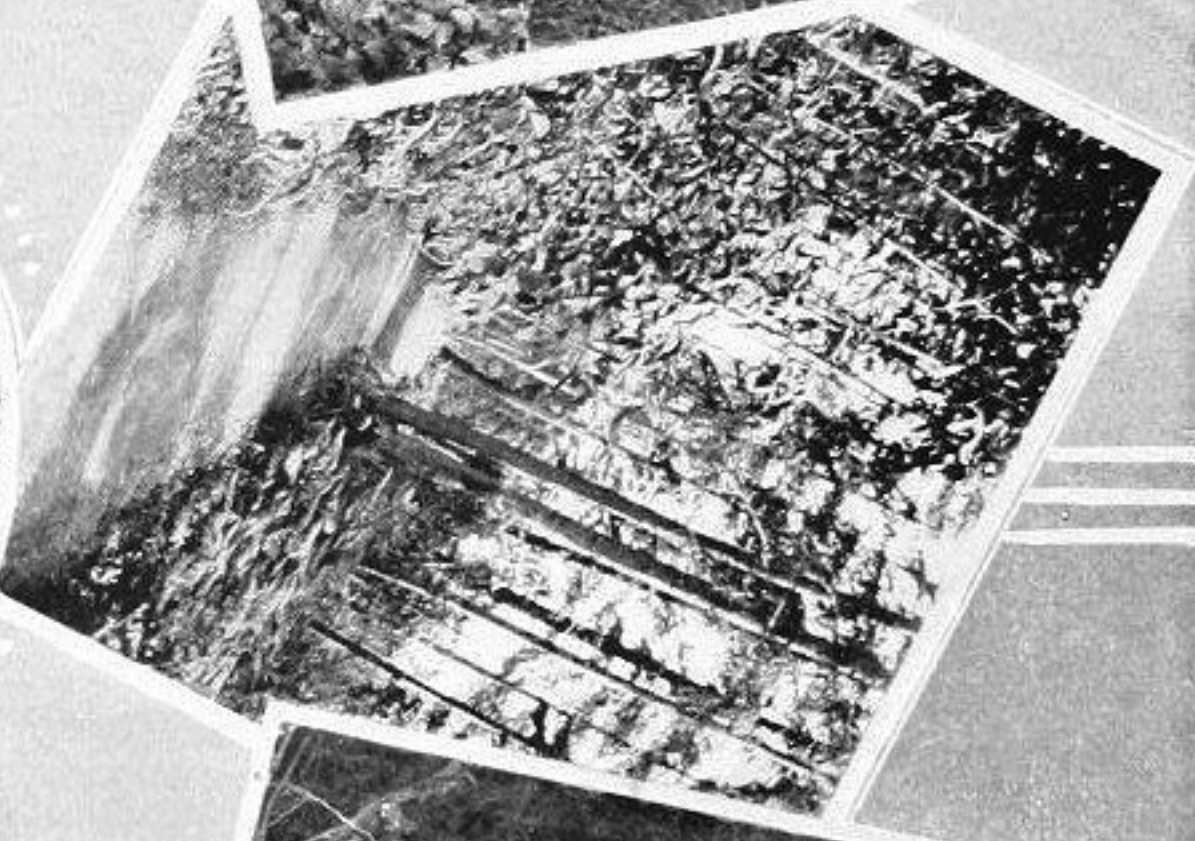

* * *

Out of its wall, from its hidden nest,
Soothed by the balmy air,
The little stranger lifts its crest,
A miracle most fair.

For months the fernlet waxed and grew,
A fluttering song of joy,
But then, alas, cold Boreas blew,
And touched it to destroy.

The Hills of Balm.

ofo

KNOW a hillside wood whose breath
Is sweet the whole year round as June;
Thicket and glade, in sun or shade,
Seem ever listening to the tune
By wandering breezes sung.

I've visited that wood in spring
To seek the flowers of May;
The breeze betrayed their ambuscade
And every blossom sweet and gay
Abroad its perfume flung.

I came again when Autumn's light
Lay golden on the wooded hills,
And all around the humming sound
Of honey bees like distant mills
Stole through the fragrant calm.

When chill grey clouds of Winter shed
Their burdens on the earth below,
Within that wood again I stood
And as the branches dropped the snow
Forth came the breath of balm.

WILL J. MEREDITH.

NOTE—Whole acres of hillside in some parts of Western Washington are covered with the shrub ceanothus, or "sweet balm," very fragrant, especially when disturbed by wind or even the falling of snow.

Our College Yell

YOU may talk about the glory of your bugle,
drum, and fife,
And your love for martial music you may tell;
We can all recall a better—'tis of campus-
home and life
Where we wake the slumb'ring echoes with our yell.

You may call upon the rabble for their "tigers"
and their cheers,
And their sycophantic chorus they may swell;
But, we'll drown them with another which goes ringing
through the years—
'Tis our own and ne'er forgotten college yell.

So we'll shout upon the campus mid athletics,
rush, and haze,
And we'll time it with the ringing of the bell;
We will shout within the class-rooms while professors
smile and gaze—
Oh, we'll rouse the drybones with our college yell.

Apple Blossoms

WHAT does the May wind bring us
From the apple-bloom's heart of gold?
A dream of love that is endless
And of hope as the leaves unfold.

What does the May wind bring us
Of courage and joy and cheer?
A thought of the budding spring-time,
A memory, and—a prayer.

What does the May wind bring us,
What secret from bud and bloom?
Come, whisper—whisper it softly,
"The world is come from the tomb."

ELLA BECK ALLEN, '00.

A Qualitative Analysis.

T WAS a senior, gazing far
Toward the blazing evening star,
Said: "I wonder if you are Mercury or no."

Stood a soph'more by her side,
Swelled a bit with conscious pride,
Strove her vanity to hide,
Spake in accents low:

"Strange how sciences unite!
Could I take a tiny mite
Of that star, in test-tube bright
Trial would quickly show.

"For I'd acids add, and stir,
Watch what changes might occur,
Till I found out if it were
Mercury or no."

The Story of Jack Alton

SITTING around a half dead fire in front of Dalton's House at Pyramid Harbor, was a group of college men. There was Shaw, of Cornell; Bixby, of Harvard; the Walters boys from Wisconsin; "Doc" Chantry, a "med" from "Pennsy"; Freeman, of Berkeley; Dick Tuttle, more familiar known as "Tut", from — I think it was some one of those rapidly growing young colleges in the State of Washington; and "Old Jim" Lindley, whose schooling consisted of eighteen years of unsuccessful prospecting. All, save the last two, were bound for the states, each with more or less of the shining sand. All of them were smoking and all were silent.

At last Lindley interrupted their meditation: "What fur did you fellows build that fire?" he growled, mopping his forehead with his shirt sleeve, "Ain't you ever goin' to get warm afore you die?"

"Thought I'd burn up some of this drift wood," answered Doc Chantry. "I'm getting hungry," he added, rather irrelevantly.

"I suppose you expect me to get you somethin' to eat," Old Jim grumbled as he shuffled slowly off to the kitchen where he was soon heard swearing musically and almost tenderly in a curious mixture of Spanish and English. Jim had prospected in Mexico long enough to learn a few "greaser cuss words." This interruption to the meditation of the group was followed by another long silence, broken this time by Dick.

"Would you fellows think, to look at me, that I had ever been engaged?" he said, staring into the fire.

Freeman jumped to his feet with unnecessary energy. "You engaged!" he exclaimed, "not while you wore those whiskers. How did it happen? Tell us about it."

"It's not very amusing, but here goes," said Dick. "You see, when I was in college, I got a bad case on a stunning little co-ed. She—well I'll not try to describe her. Suffice it to say she was the only girl in the world for me and I fought my way to her heart and we became engaged. My father, who had accumulated a comfortable fortune, was living at that time, and I had some money myself, so we expected to get married at the end of the year, when I was to graduate.

“Along in the latter part of February everything went wrong. The Musical Clubs gave a concert and Edith—that was her name, Edith Kingdom—was to sing, and after the music there was to be an exhibition of hypnotism by Harry Stanton, a student then attending the college. He was a tall, dark, slender, handsome fellow with the most piercing black eyes I ever saw.

“During his exhibition, Stanton hypnotised various people, including Edith, and performed wonders with them, but I remember only three things distinctly. First, he was to all appearances more particular with Edith than with the others. Second, Edith fainted when brought out of her hypnotized state. Third, she would have nothing at all to do with me and when I berated Stanton for his treatment of her she threw her engagement ring on the floor and declared she did not need a champion of my type. Naturally I thought it was all some dirty work of Stanton, I knew he didn't like me. I left the place and about an hour later I went down to Stanton's room to see him about it. I told him I would get the truth out of him or know the reason why. He smiled and this is about what he said: 'I won't tell you what I have done to her except that I have made her despise you. She shall never marry you. She shall marry me. I can accomplish all by means of hypnotism. As you know, she is an orphan with considerable money and is sole heir of the rich uncle who takes such tender care of her. My motive is plain—I need the money.'

"What would you have done in my place? Just what I did, I gave him a thrashing in spite of the knife he drew on me. I got my 'ticket' for what was called a brutal assault on a fellow student. I spent about a week trying to see Edith or her uncle in the hope of squaring matters, but they evidently didn't care to have their names in any way connected with that of the 'gentlemanly bruiser' as I was called by the people in general at that time.

"I was called to my father's death bed soon after that, and I haven't been back to the old college since."

There was a long pause, during which Tut lit his pipe and kicked a few sticks into the dying fire.

"Didn't you ever see her again?" asked Doc at last.

"Yes," said Tut, slowly, "once last fall, she was singing in a music hall in Seattle. I tried to see her but she left the hall right after her song and, as I afterwards found out, the city also. I couldn't let her sing in music halls for a living, so I put a detective on her trail with instructions to give her the letter which I entrusted to him and which contained half of my badly shattered fortune. I also told him to keep me posted as to where she was. I didn't want her to know where the money came from for fear she might not take it. He knew his business all right and got the money into her hands without giving her an opportunity to make inquiries. Then he wrote me about her. Stanton had married her, secured all her property, and divorced her in a little over a year. You know what I did with my nest egg, I bought a lot of cattle and started them north on the Victory. That was several months ago and have yet to hear from them. When I get a little more money I am going back to the states, perhaps to her, though I fear she will never love me while Stanton can influence her, for he certainly does hate me. If I had him here I'd—"

"Say, do you fellows think I'm a goin' to send an automobicycle 'round there after you?" bawled Old Jim from the kitchen. "Come to life and to supper, too."

"It's my fault they went to sleep," laughed Tut. "I've been spinning a very dry and highly improbable yarn to them about my being engaged, etcetera."

Shortly after supper everyone except Tut took himself and his baggage over to Chilkat in the clumsy scow, politely called the ferry. Old Jim went along to bring the boat back. He returned about nine o'clock and with him a tall, dark man, whom he introduced to Tut as Mr. Stanton. "Wants to go to Porcupine to look at a mine. Never been up the trail," added Jim.

"All right, I'll take care of him in the morning," said Tut, yawning. "I'm going to bed now."

In Porcupine City the following evening Tut, very much excited, was telling how he had directed a stranger on the road to Porcupine, and how he (Tut) had followed in a few minutes and had come in sight of the stranger just in time to see him disappearing in the quicksands of the Big Salmon river; how the stranger must have misunderstood the directions, for instead of taking the left fork of the road he had gone straight ahead to his death.

The affair was a nine day's wonder and that was all that came of it.

A few months afterwards the body of Jack Alton, alias Dick Tuttle, was found on the trail below Dawson. There was no apparent cause for death, but in his hand was the following letter:

DEAREST JACK:—

I suppose I ought to say Dear Mr. Tuttle, but to me you are Jack Alton, always. Your letter arrived today, and I have read it over many times, as I know it is the last I shall ever get from you.

I write this letter to let you know how Harry Stanton came between us. When he hypnotized me first, at college, I had a vision. I saw you directing a horseman falsely; then the horseman rode on his way and presently started to cross a stream; the horse balked and the rider beat him over the head with a stick; then the poor beast jumped well out into the stream and there it seemed to be stuck fast; both horse and rider struggled desperately, only to sink at last slowly but surely beneath the waters, and all the time you were standing in the brush smiling. I believed you a murderer. I could not see the rider's face, but I could see yours plainly. On the day of Harry's death I saw it all over again, but this time I saw the rider's face also and it was that of Harry Stanton.

I shall be dead by the time you get this letter, dear Jack, for now, when everything is bright at last, I am going to kill myself.

Good bye, dear laddie, I will leave you my fortune—my love.

EDITH.

The Majestic, New York,

September the Twentieth.

P. S.—The only evidence against you—your letter—is destroyed. I took good care to burn it.

E.

"Heart trouble," said the loafers after an examination of the letter.

Down in 'Frisco when Freeman heard about it he whistled softly and said: "So Tut's story was true, after all. Probably they would never have met but for co-education. I never did believe in the co-ed system."

To Seattle

S Tyre and Sidon long ago their navies sent afar
To conquer and to colonize and hold in peace and war
The margin of the Mid-World Sea; as Carthage
ruled the wave;
As Athens sent her Wooden Walls from Persia's power to save
Her people and their liberties; as Rome in later time,
And Venice, sent their merchantmen to trade in every clime,
So thou, Queen City of the West, that sittest by the sea,

Send out thy fleets and bind the world in tribute unto thee.

As Thebes, Memphis, Nineveh, the ancient nations taught;
As Athens, Rome, Byzantium, the kindling spirit caught;
As Egypt's Alexandria the rendezvous became
Of students and of learned men, of all who bore the name
Of seekers after truth, so thou thy University,
Thy schools and colleges upbuild, O city by the sea,
Till of the western continent the center thou shalt be,—
Thy fame reach all Truth's followers and draw them unto thee.

Oh Naples, for her lovely bay, no lovelier than thine,
Geneva, for her mountain view, and is not yours as fine?
Her lake, and thou hast also lakes, are famous; Erin's isle
Is noted for its verdant hills; thy hills with verdure smile,
And when the sun in springtime shines, the blue Italian skies,
Are not more softly blue than those that greet thy children's eyes.
So, with thy commerce, golden mines, thy schools, thy scenery,
Grow rich, grow wise, grow great, until all earth shall honor thee.

W. J. M.

The Purple and Gold

ORDID greed can never dim the brightness
of our gold;

Our purple rare, the coffers of a monarch
proudly hold,

The southern sun may tarnish them, the northern storms deface,

But in each heart the college colors hold a shrined place.

Let Harvard boast a crimson scarf, proud
Yale may flaunt the blue,

Swift progress marches westward, and the old gives way to new,

Mid giant firs young Washington her
banner proudly flies,

Like gleams of golden sunshine striping
purple western skies.

Then sing her praises louder, let the echoes fill the air!

Our college boys are valiant, our college girls are fair.

The precious looms of Orient in vain their wealth unfold,

For richer hue than purple, or for brighter
than the gold.

AUDREY BLANCHE SOUDER.

Sunset on the Pacific

The Setting Sun

He gazed with soul drowned in remorse
For by-gone deeds he dared not tell ;
It glowed a bloody tragedy
Mid lurid flames of Hell.

She gazed while tender memories
Suffused with tears her happy
eyes ;
It gleamed a golden glory o'er
The gates of Paradise.

OUR Alma Mater now to thee,
Washington, my Washington,
We sing thy praise in melody,
Washington, my Washington.
Long may your fame and and glory rise
To fill the earth e'en to the skies
And live until this old world dies,
Washington, my Washington.

Forth from thy care and sheltering walls,
Washington, my Washington,
We go to where new duty calls,
Washington, my Washington.
In track, debate, football and glee,
Long may you still victorious be
Till all the world shall bow to thee,
Washington, my Washington.

Long shall our thoughts return to thee,
Washington, my Washington,
Be evergreen in memory,
Washington, my Washington.
Your valiant sons will use their might
To make the world move towards the light—
Your daughters fair will speed the right,
Washington, my Washington.

Fair as Chief Rainier's snowy brow,
Washington, my Washington,
Great as the state which loves you now,
Washington, my Washington.
Long live you shall, till Puget's wave
Shall cease to roll o'er reef and cave,
Farewell to thee and may God save,
Washington, my Washington.

THE Club is composed of students who are interested in the advancement of the study of modern languages. The work of this year has been principally the discussion of the authors representing the most important periods of the literature of the French, German and Spanish languages. Special programs, including appropriate musical selections, were prepared on Goethe, Victor Hugo and Cervantes.

THE Y. W. C. A. work during the past year has been essentially practical, membership and interest having greatly increased. The association has furnished a room for the women students. The cabinet gave a reception to the association girls, in addition to the customary semi-annual receptions to new students. Sunday devotional meetings have been begun in the women's dormitory, and a Bible class is planned for next year. The fall campaign is one of the efficient methods of work to be given prominence in the future.

Organized 1888

THE past year has been a significant one in the history of the association. The reorganization of the work by Mr. E. T. Colton, International Secretary for the West, and Mr. S. B. Hanna, secretary for the Pacific Northwest, together with the securing of a general secretary, has given an added impulse which has been felt in every line of association activity.

The visits of Mr. E. T. Colton and Mr. G. W. Leavitt, Traveling Secretary for the Student Volunteer Movement, have brought the association into closer touch with the national organization.

The scope of the work for next year will be extended yet further, and to this end we solicit the interest and co-operation of all.

W. T. Harris Club

THE W. T. Harris club was organized in 1899 and is composed of members of the Pedagogy classes. Its object is to further the individual activities of its members independent of the Dean of the Department. Meetings are held every two weeks, and papers are read, followed by discussion. Programs have increased in interest with each successive meeting, and would do credit to any educational institution.

Pharmaceutical Society

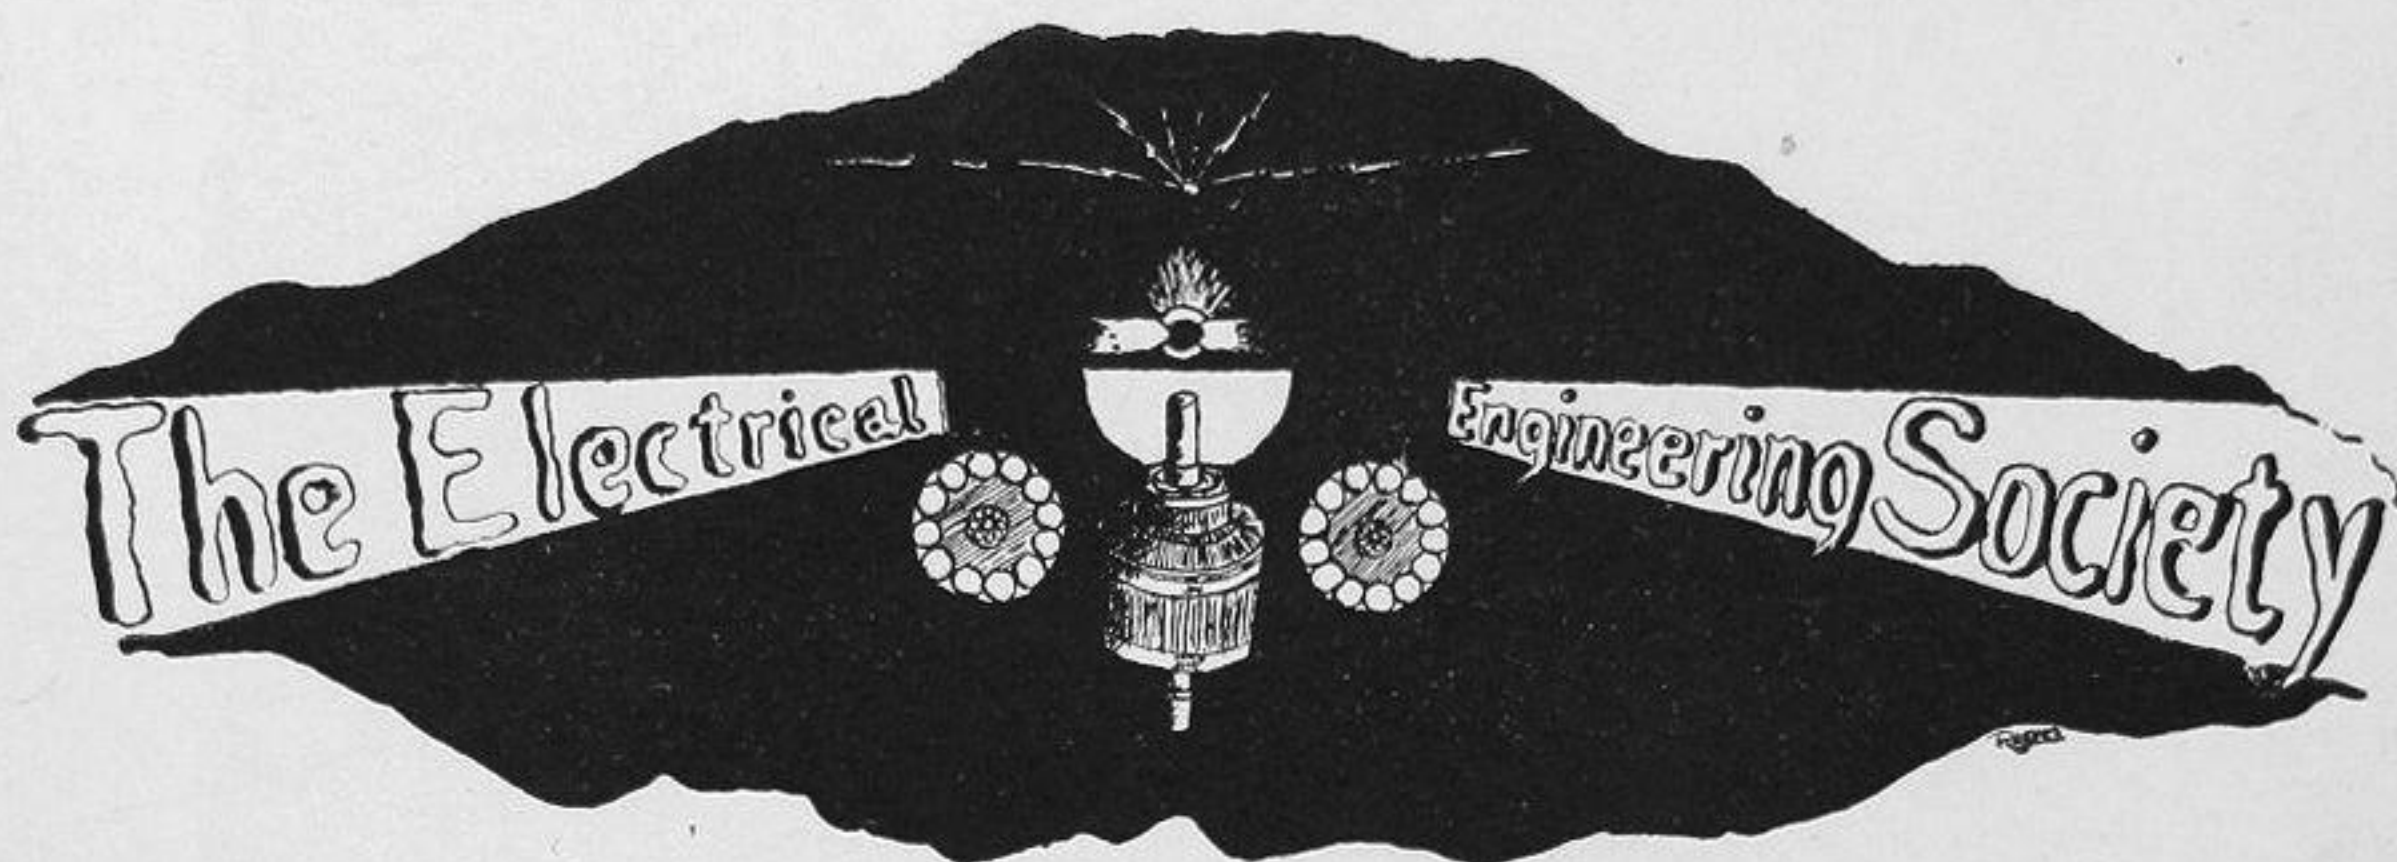

THE society this year has been a great success. Every pharmacy student attends and takes a great interest in the affairs of the society. Weekly meetings are held, and during the year several addresses have been given by men of note in pharmaceutical matters. Debating has been used to good advantage on many leading topics.

THIS Association was formed in the spring of 1900 by some of the prominent electrical engineering students. At present any one who has registered in electrical engineering is eligible to membership. The object of the association is for the study of recent inventions in electricity and to bring these inventions before the public. Last year a very successful exhibit was given, and the exhibit this year, which will be given on the 17th of May, will probably be the greatest electrical display ever given in the Northwest.

Mathematical Society

THE Mathematical Society of the University was founded for the purpose of bringing together persons interested in the study of Pure and Applied Mathematics for the presentation and discussion of mathematical topics embracing the range of school and University work and of advanced research. The meetings of the Society are held every month at the homes of the different members.

THE purpose of this club is to promote interest in the science of chemistry. Papers upon the current topics of the day are read; questions of general interest are debated; subjects for research and thesis work are discussed, giving the members a general knowledge of the advanced work. Biographies are read and illustrated lectures are given.

This is the first year of the club's existence, but it has surely met with great success.

Soft-Mores!!

Soft-Mores!!

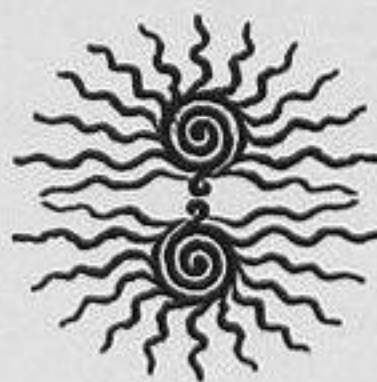

WHEN in the course of human events a man suffers defeat, he generally, if he is a man, acknowledges that he has met his intellectual or physical superior.

We would wish that the Soft-mores, rather than to be the carping conglomeration of unambitious backwoodsmen, were men of honor, men of sufficient mentality, who realize that their existence in this world is not due to circumstances over which they have any control, but rather to a series of most singular favors for which they ought to do homage to their propitious patrons, the members of the class of '04." We do not mean to boast of the mental and physical superiority of the Freshman Class, but in justice to our worthy friends in the upper classes we wish to go on record for saying that the Soft-more class is but an apology for what it might be. With lobster-like agility they invariably bring up the rear in whatever student-enterprises the Freshmen and the upper classmen thrust them into. The SOFT-MORES have frequently rendered conspicuous their many shortcomings by repeated defeats; with unpardonable impudence they have repeatedly intruded upon the rights of their superiors—the class of “04”—when that class would not deign to recognize their ludicrous conception of importance. We do not deny that they command the respect of their kind, and for that we give them credit, but as members of their mediocre family are found but in the class of “03” their adherents are decidedly in the minority. It is but repeating a sentiment which has for some time been exceedingly popular with the better class of students, that the Soft-more class is an unknown quantity; a derelict on the high sea of collegiate vicissitudes; a miserable formation of loose material; a deplorable organization, utterly irresponsible, whose more brilliant satellites on solemn occasions adorn the University wheel-barrow, and whose serried ranks have, since the advent of the “Freshies,” been utterly unable to keep their emblem, which has now become symbolical of retrogression, floating from the University flag-staff.

PETER MCGINNIES, '04.

H, the aims of the Freshies are many,
And the width of their range is so great,
They vary where'er you may meet them
From the north to the southernmost state.

They long to be great in athletics,
In the gridiron's mud to fall ;
To vault to the highest record,
Or play in the basket ball.

They wish to attend all the parties,
And to "jolly" a Sophomore girl ;
To steal all the flaming posters,
To live in a giddy whirl.

They desire to reside in a "frat" house,
And wear a fraternity pin ;
To have an occasional rough-house,
With all its accompanying din.

And some wish to mount to the rostrum,
And lay down the law by the yard ;
Or to edit the college paper,
And to pose as a coming bard.

But the rest of the whims of the Freshies,
I'm going to spare you the pain.
For the greatest of all on this Campus
Is to carry a Sophomore cane.

Ode to the Brave

- I. In the lower hall of the building
Was bustle, confusion and noise,
And the whole lab was filled completely
With numberless Freshman boys.

- II. For the Freshman caps had been stolen
And a Soph in that lab knew how,
And the Freshmen intended to find them,
If need be with a row.

- III. But Byers, the lord of that kingdom
Do you think he could keep away?
He talked and scolded and threatened—
And the boys continued to stay.

IV. But the Soph then escaped by the window,
And made full speed for the brush,
With the two whole classes pursuing
For a regular, rousing rush.

V. They grappled and fell in confusion,
First one now the other on top;
Till down from the lab hastened Byers,
This "horrible"? thing to stop.

VI. He snatched as he ran at a willow
And broke off a piece for a whip;
Then grabbed the first boy he encountered
And gave him a cut on the lip.

VII. He dug midst the struggling couples
And ferruled each boy that he found,
"I'll have you all up for expulsion,
And the King by the Prexy he crowned!"

VIII. The boys each stood up and accepted
The punishment given them there;
And Byers walked back to the building
With a very self-satisfied air.

IX. And now midst the relics of history,
In this far off western land,
Should be placed the cudgel of Byers
With a purple and golden band.

X. So that when, in the coming ages,
They may search for our weapons and toys,
They shall know how here in our era
Were punished the college boys.

A Complaint Against the Professors

SINCE I entered this institution I have been accumulating a series of complaints which I have treasured up until a time came when I could write them out and be safe from consequences.

All of the professors have certain in-born faults which they have been developing all their lives until they had reached their most irritating height just as I came in as a Freshman.

The first of these that I noticed is the large and arrogant regard they all have for their own particular subject. They believe it to be super-eminent over all the rest, and that anything else that one might study is incidental and pursued with an end to being a possible aid to the particular subject that they teach. When, for instance, you complain that the pressure of other work makes it hard for you to put more than four hours a day on chemistry, the look you get is glazed and very chill. There is evidently something lacking in you. You begin to fear that you have not fully appreciated chemistry, and that you have probably insulted the professor. But, if so, you are borne with. He decides that you have been pushed into the University at too young an age. He advises that you have undertaken too much and had better wait till you are older and your mind is better developed before you attempt chemistry.

Of course you can't argue with the professor. He is smarter than you and besides, any good points you may have you must withhold. Your relation to him is a receiver, not a giver, of light, and so you say, "Oh yes," and "I never thought of that."

Then they have a fault from which our suffering is only temporary, but often acute. It is the habit certain of them have of enjoying themselves over what you don't know. There have been times, in political science recitations, when I have given an explanation which apparently struck the professor as a new economic theory. Usually he does not understand the grounds it is based on nor the subtle reasoning by which it is evolved, and he doesn't approve of it. But he sees it is an opportunity for torturing in a barbarous manner that he is very fond of. On these occasions you are grasped by both legs and held up and worried. He gets you from above and from below, a feint on one side and a thrust on the other; then to confuse you he holds you upside down. You fight desperately all the time, but you are helpless and are finally set down in a dejected state, convinced that there is no good in the whole business.

Or he may not be in a playful mood, and seems fatigued with what you say. He sits back and smiles faintly, and then asks if any one in the whole class knows anything. No one says they do, and then to humiliate us all he goes way back and has us try on little things that are beneath us. We are all more or less subject to this wrong, but nothing can be done. I was once told by a professor who didn't grasp my whole meaning, that I didn't know. This instantly relieved me of all responsibility in the matter and was a comfort.

One thing more; the subject of psychical philosophy is one which affords opportunity for great generalization. One's imagination or thought may wander about like a stray dog and not be afraid of getting into topics not pertinent to the subject.

I have heard, in a short term of work in that line, long and wonderfully varied discourses upon every conceivable thing in the universe. Copious outpourings on personal experiences with many examples of peculiarities and wonders the professor has observed in his own mind. Powerful unfolding of knotty problems concerning the disposition and thought of babies, ruminating lectures whose extent bewilders and exhausts. I have groaned under hearing these exegetical labors until I fear I have become embittered.

Now I think that I can lay claim to an ordinary amount of long suffering, and that I am aware, in a charitable way, of the many frailties to which I myself am subject, but I cannot but feel that we should have the privilege for once to explain to these professors carefully and earnestly just what manner of men they are.

Faith here be a young man named Glinny,
 Who noo hov th' nicknom av "skinny";
 But oncet an th' cinder,
 Be Pat! he's a wunder,
 Oh, he's a grate athleet is Glinny.

Oh, would you know the latest,
 To reach the hall of fame,
 Just ask of Ava Dodson
 The first chief justice's name.

She told her wondering comrades,
 "Now really you are geese;
 Why, don't you know John Marshall
 Was the justice of the peace?"

Oh, I am famed Billy, the Major,
 Who scared those insurgents, I'll wager,
 When I flourished my gun,
 They all turned to run--
 Now, please each bow down to the Major.

My tactics of war are astounding,
 My fame through the world is resounding,
 From my head to my feet,
 I cannot be beat
 When the the bugles of battle are sounding.

HE U. of W. haf von very clever man
At der Dormentorees,
To see him shust conduct der band,
Dat's zomtings, if you please.

He hops und shumps und marks der time,
And shows such taste and nous
Dat dere's to equal him no vun,
Mine clever Alfred Strauss.

He fills our ears mit lofely sounds,
Applause "brings down der house;"
Dot happens to few oder boys,
But little Alfred Strauss.

He dakes der viddle in his hands,
Und he shust blay it, too !
He dake der schtick to beat der time.
Mine gracious, dot vos drue.

His band blays not too loud nor zoft,
It kicks not up a rouse,
Oh, peautiful! Der schaps are few
Like leedle Alfred Strauss.

Und ven der peeble hear dot band
Dey at each oder glance,
Den vag deir heads, den move deir veet,
Und vish dot dey might dance.

Und ven dey blay de "Danube Blue,"
Vitch vos vor an encore,
Dey velcome it as zometings new,
Und calls vor it vonce more.

Der peeble listen as dey blay
As quiet as a mouse;
Dere's none vor dance tunes any day
Like leedle Alfred Strauss.

Words! Words!

Words!

Y stub pen lingers in ink stained fingers
A-writing words in batches,
But for every word that ever occurred
Its hard to find one that matches.

I cannot write except what's trite
The page is filled with scratches
The light burns low, I'm done, I know,
The ink has dried in patches.

There is a dirth on this old earth
Of word my memory catches,
You asked for verse, here's something worse,
I'll wait till a new crop hatches.

There is here a lithesome lass
Who wrote her father for a pass,
But her father with a slam
Returned her letter and said "damn!
Print! your writing's not my class."

When this Freshie first entered the College
 From the Podunk's quiet town,
 A more conscientious student
 Ne'er aimed for a cap and gown.

He worked, and worried, and studied,
 And kept as still as a mouse,
 Till one of the frats had "spiked" him
 And he went to the Phi Delt house.

And now this same young Freshie
 Sits dreaming before exam,
 Smoking enormous meerschaums,
 With never a minute to cram.

The Fable of the Boy with the Political Bump

ONCE upon a time a Big Thing from the Bunch Grass country blew in at the Diploma Factory. He had a face like a 110 James Free Lunch just after the 5-5 Game and Hair the hue of the Second Avenue pavement during the Klondike rush; a Complexion like the Add. building Door Mat and his Feet interfered.

He had a tendency for Politics and High-balls. He had had experience with a capital X and was wise.

A Headfeeler had once told his mother that he was the Possessor of a Bump, the exact counterpart of one owned by your Uncle Mark. He saw that the only way to become a second Dick Croker was to work the Society for the Importation of Corresponding Secretaries at Fifty dollars ($50) per throw. So he filled out a Six-Bit application blank and was given a Locker. Owing to the Two mile limit he also joined the Musical Clubs. News of an Election brought this bright Mamma's Pride, with the Political and High-ball Bump, out with his Mit.

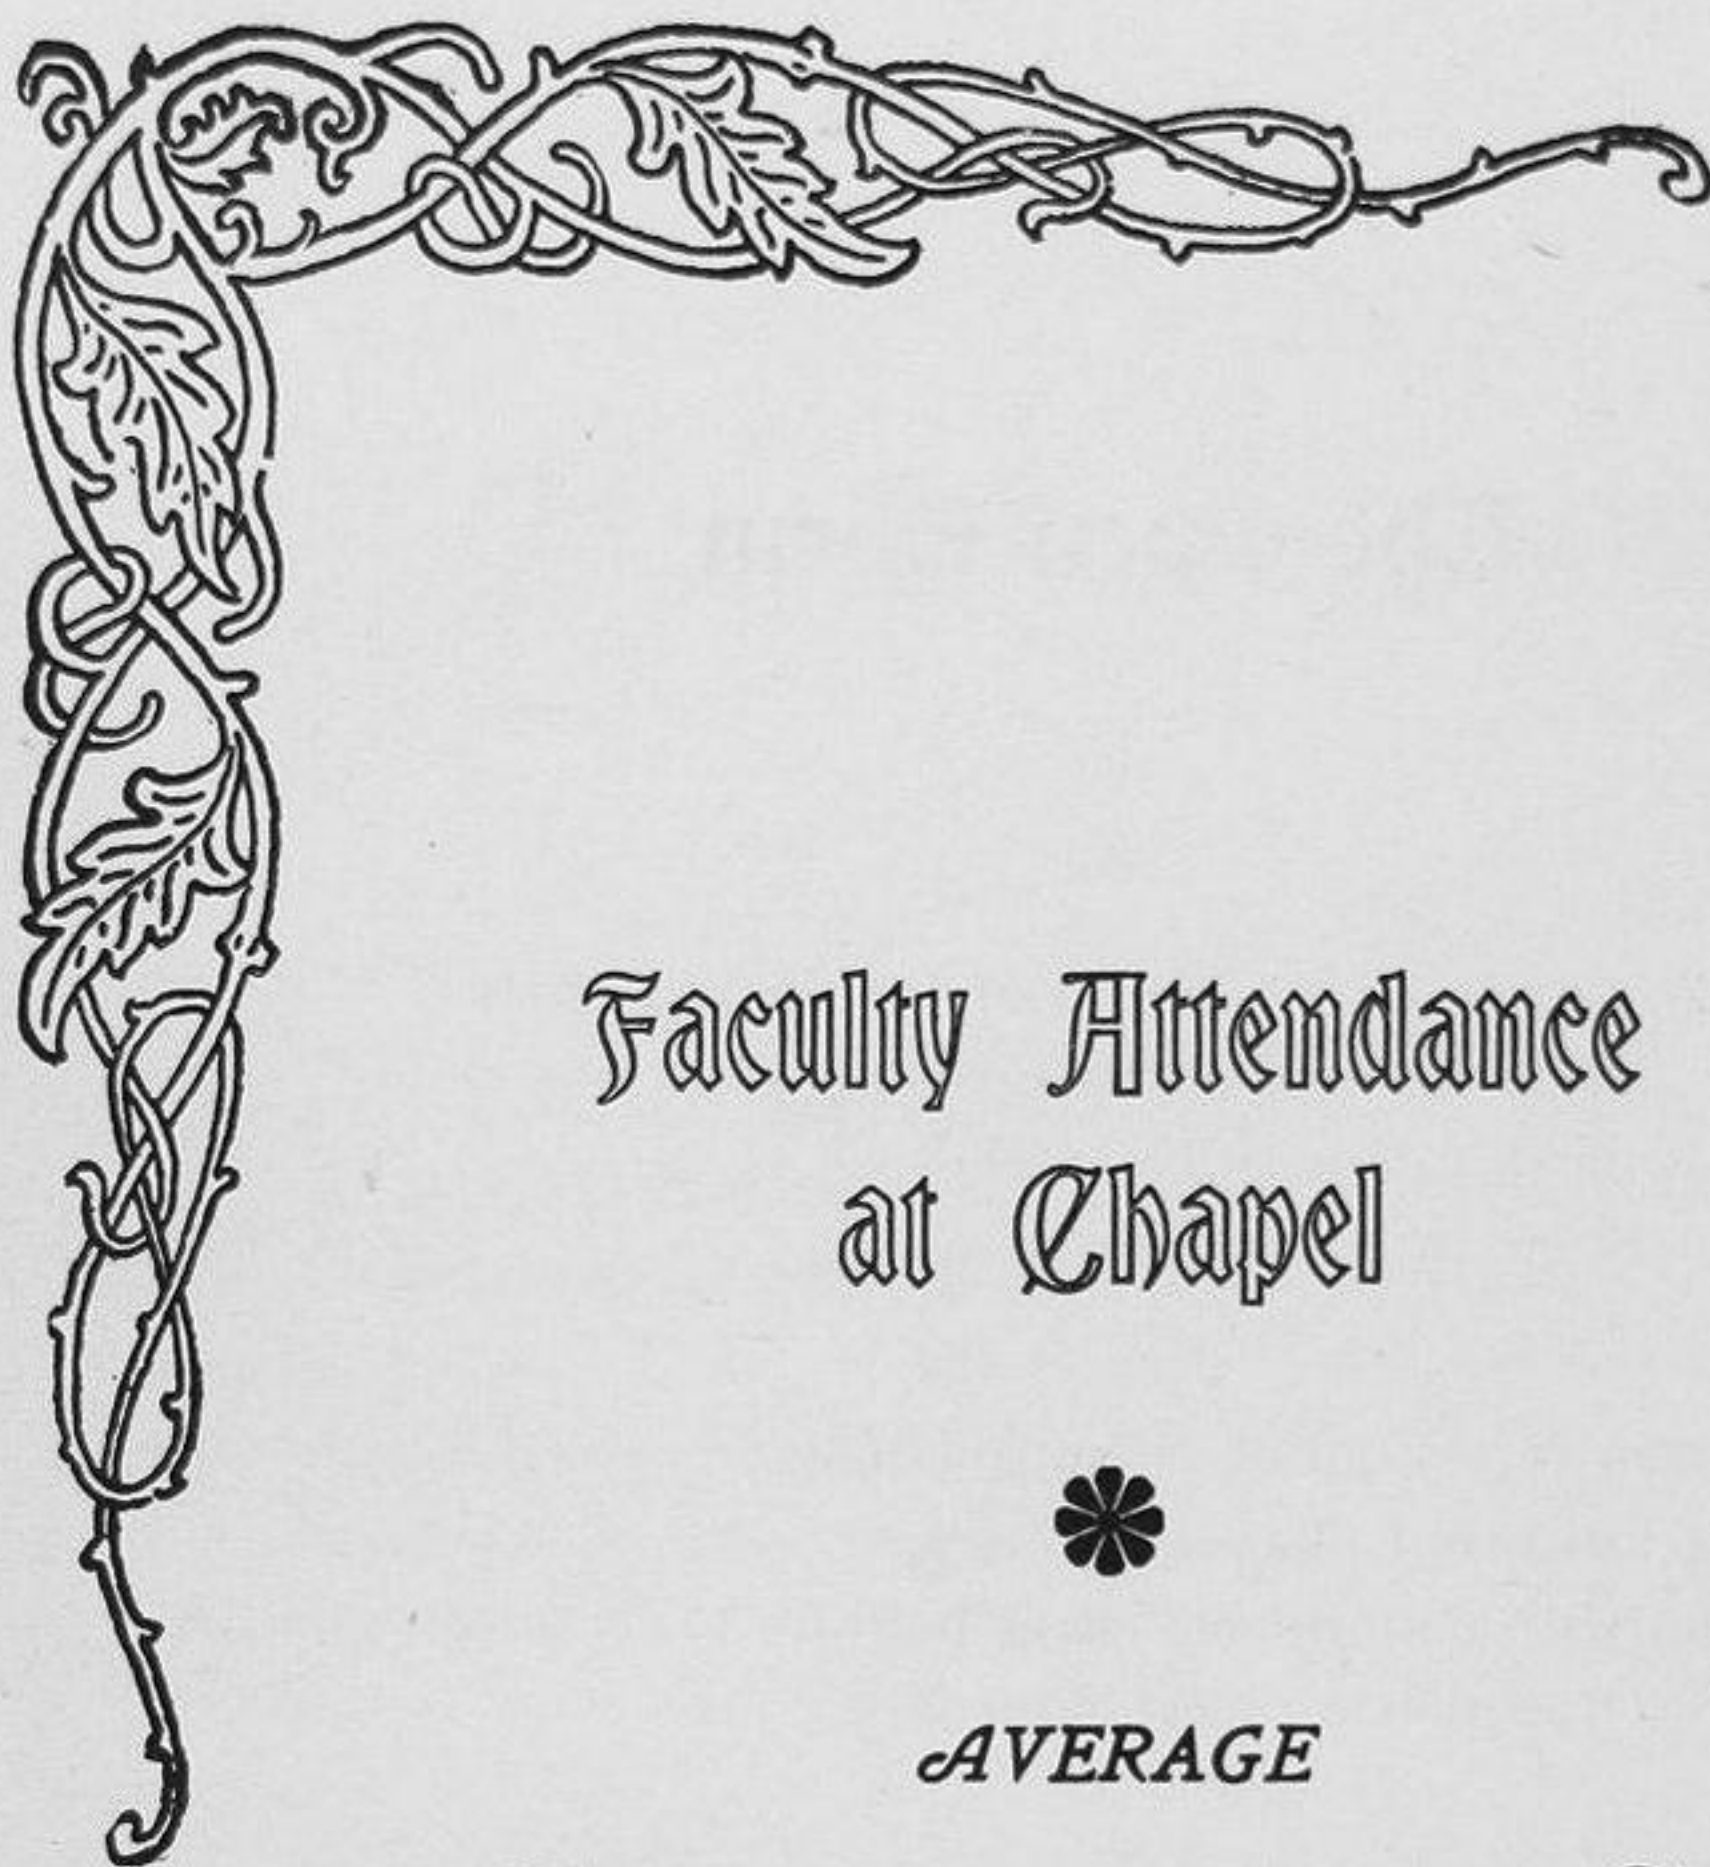

After a Streunous Talk with a Trusty he was helped to a Nomination. Being a Needy youth and having a certified-to receipt for a stool at the Uplifting Society's table, he drew votes.

They were mainly Pedagogical Prodigies, Library Digs, Laboratory Fiends and Chemistry Sharks who jarred loose to exercise the Inalienable Right of American Citizenship, in favor of the Chairman for the Diffusion of Soul-Saving-Salve to the South Sea Savages.

He got away with the Bunch and took the Pole. He kept it to the finish, when he came in under the Wire lengths ahead without using the Whip.

After the Glad Palm gag had Wearied him he sought Privacy in a Booze Bazaar and had one of his Bump formers do a Steve Brodie down his Throat.

The Open Dorm

OW here's to the health of the darling girls,
They who did so condescend
Within the pale of Lyon Hall
Some moments few to spend.

'Twas very kind of them to come
Into that place so dreary,
And with a smile the cares beguile
Of which we were so weary.

'Twas good to see their childish glee,
With laughter quite angelic
They waltzed around there, up and down,
In search of some old relic.

But when the merry thieves were gone,
We were indeed forsaken,
Since each of them in wayward fun
A heart away had taken.

A Tyee Legend

ONCE in the days when all the braves were tillicums and the maidens were fair to see, Lallygag of the Back-ups, a powerful tribe of the prairies far to the land of the rising sun, and Te-he of the Hahas, which dwelt in the lands of the Skagit floods, sought favors from the maiden Drooping Eyes.

Many rains beat upon the sides of the great wigwam, and still Drooping Eyes made goo-goos at the young braves. Many potlatches were held and the skookum braves each hiked up the pike.

At last in the tepee, where were placed the trophies of conquest and other curious things, while all the braves and maidens were listening to the wisdom of the chiefs, Te-he met the maiden Drooping Eyes wandering alone midst the relics of the past. Soft nothings fell from Te-he's lips; tales of the past and many other things filtered into the delicate clam-shell ear of the maiden. The mud flat eloquence of Te-he, fierce in its intensity, moved Drooping Eyes greatly.

As the sun dropped below the Olympics, the maiden Drooping Eyes and the brave Te-he walked down the path; and round the camp fires in the wigwams, braves told of Lallygag's finish.

These views show PROF. WILLSON'S Academy of Modern Dancing, Deportment and Etiquette, the oldest, largest and most elegant school in the State of Washington, teaching all the very latest ballroom and theatrical dances, private or in class. Prof. Jas. W. H. Willson and wife wish to announce to patrons and the public in general that this academy of dancing, delarte, acting, ballroom and theatrical dancing has been conducted as a modern first-class and exclusive school of physical development, deportment and etiquette for many years past in this city, including seven both lady and gentleman instructors for the assistance of our pupils. Our original methods introduced in dancing is an entire new system, and it is very beneficial to young people for easy and graceful carriage. Parents and people of good social standing are welcome at all times for inspection of my school. Only first-class patronage solicited, for we undeniably reserve the right to refuse admission to our hall and school at any time to those we see fit.
